Again, I Do Not Choose When Women Start, Beware

Radio and Flying Gandhi Sick, India Sickly

—By Arthur Brisbane—

WINSLOW, ARIZ., April 12—The Cosmopolitan Magazine, put on board this eastbound train at Williams, Ariz., tells you that Calvin Coolidge is through with public office.

In his straight forward statement in Cosmopolitan, the ex-President says he will not run for the Senate. He would be glad to do useful work, but feels that his presence in the Senate, going there from the White House, would embarrass some of his colleagues. It probably would.

It would embarrass, especially those that are publicly dry, and privately wet.

However, no man can say that his troubles are all behind him. The ex-President may find himself in office again. He will still be a young man in 1936, when Herbert Hoover finishes his second term.

It is a 100 per cent certainty that Mr. Coolidge will make no political mistake in the meantime. He simply does not know how to make them.

Is there any doubt that millions of Americans in 1936 will want "four years more of Coolidge?"

Of all misfortunes that can befall a man, one of the worst is to have a band of determined women in league against him. Read "Euripides," "The Bacchae," and you will believe it.

Some congressmen will soon believe it also. They are the so-called "Water-Gin" congressmen, accused by the women's organization for national prohibition reform of carrying gin on one shoulder, water on the other.

This organization of women opposed to prohibition intends to attack the dry voting, wet drinking statesmen in their home constituencies.

Among the farmers' wives until recently the percentage of insanity was very high. Living isolated lives, working hard from dawn until long after dark seeing nobody but some timedull, tired husband and farm hands was bad for the mind.

Then came rural free delivery bringing pictures of the latest fashions, and the telephone with news of neighbors. Greatest blessing of all, the radio. Farmers' wives tune in and retain their sanity.

To the exceptional woman, rich, able to do what she pleases, but hitherto finding little amusing excitement after 60, flying offers relief.

The British Duchess of Bedford, 64 years old, goes up and down in the earth at a rate of speed that old Satan never dreamed of.

She has just started the second leg of flight from London to South Africa, an able pilot and mechanic keeping her company.

You would say that a flying man or woman could write a book, "Things I Have Seen" that would eclipse Voltaire's chances with "Things Seen," for Voltaire crawled around on the earth's surfaces.

However, not the eyes but the heart and brain do the real seeing. Nobody, for instance, could see a landscape as Claude Lorraine could see it. No one else sees a baby as its mother sees it.

Gandhi, starved Hindu, whose sincerity causes the British Empire more anxiety than all his 200,000,000 fellow Hindus combined, learns, as other ascetants have done, that the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.

Weighing barely 100 pounds, eating no meat, taking no stimulants, a walk of 200 miles, that would seem a joke to an Irishman or a Scotchman, has exhausted him. He cannot go on.

The real problem of India has nothing to do with Great Britain and is illustrated in news of a clash between high caste Hindus and "untouchables," miserable creatures, numbering millions, despised by the Hindus of high rank, who consider it a disgrace even to touch them. Many untouchables were cruelly beaten, in spite of police protection. A country that classes millions of human beings lower than dogs, demands the right to marry girls under ten years of age to adult men, and to burn young widows alive with their dead husbands' bodies has problems more serious than British rule.

Senator Arthur Robinson, Republican from Indiana, says: "The Senate will never ratify the League Court, so-called. Root formula, drafted by the Englishman, named Cecil Hurst."

Mrs. Hendrick's victory, with more than 200,000 votes to spare over Deneen, she opposing, he supporting the World Court foolishness, will make all Republicans think that can think.

Who would imagine that the people of this nation want to be tied up in European agreements or have United States freedom of action hampered or

POLICE TRAIL 2 WOMEN IN SLASHINGS

Newton Mothers Form a Vigilance Committee as the Fifth Infant Is Attacked

As psychologists probed the motive for the crimes, Newton police today were conducting an intensive search for two middle-aged women suspected of having slashed the faces of five helpless infants in the Nonantum sq. section of that city.

A description of the women was given by Mrs. Martin Gardner, who saw them fleeing the scene in a taxicab after she discovered her baby had been disfigured while it lay in its carriage outside a Newton store.

The fifth slashing was revealed by Mrs. Irwin H. Rubin of Lindbrooke st., who declared that a Newtonville mother whose name is withheld, visited her home to compare a stain on the face of her infant with that inflicted on Mrs. Rubin's baby son.

Coincident with the report of the fifth victim of the slasher, came the formation of a private vigilance committee to curb the fiendish attacks.

MAY BE CHILD

Meanwhile, Dr. Karl M. Bowman, of the Psychopathic Hospital, advanced the theory that the attacks were the work of either an abnormal male adult or of a child with perverted mind.

"If a sharp instrument has been used," Dr. Bowman asserted, "it would indicate that a person of mature years, with some abnormal tendency, is responsible for these attacks.

Putney-on-Thames, England, April 12 (AP)—Steered by a little American, Robert E. Swartwout of New York, Cambridge today swept to a two-length victory over Oxford in the 82d rowing of their historic boat race on the Thames.

It was the first time an American had ever steered a shell in the famous event, and also the first time an American had earned a place in the Cambridge boat.

By today's victory Cambridge became one up on Oxford, breaking the ties of 40 victories each and one deadlock entered on the rowing books ever since 1829, when the great event first was held.

It was a proud moment for the light blue of Cambridge as its shell swept ahead at the three-quarters mark after Oxford had been leading most of the way, and then finished strongly in 19 minutes 9 seconds.

The record for the race is 18

EX-GOVERNOR ATTACKED IN GARRETT CASE

More Fireworks Are Expected When the Hearings Are Resumed Monday

Former Governor Alvan T. Fuller is a scrapper and no gentleman, declared former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien today in answer to Mr. Fuller's accusation that he, Mr. O'Brien, is a cheap liar.

These mutual felicitations resulting from O'Brien's denial that he ever "ran out" of a scheduled conference with the former Governor and Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson on the Boston police situation enlarged the effect of sensational investigation of Oliver E. Garrett.

Fuller gave the lie to O'Brien over the telephone from Clintontown, Mich., and declared he would be home to celebrate his clearance from the accusations of the public hearings of the Garrett probe.

"What's at Charlestown—a sanitarium?" inquired O'Brien today. And added:

"The former Governor is running true to form and is very amusing. You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. Not even the governorship of Massachusetts can make a gentleman out of some people."

The former Suffolk County prosecutor, considerably riled and under the handicap of a heavy cold, read the former governor's opinion of him, drew a deep breath and answered:

NEVER INVITED

"I never had an appointment with the Governor and Commissioner Wilson. The news articles of August, 1925, will bear out that statement.

"Furthermore I was district attorney until Jan. 1, 1927, a year and a half after the episode referred to by Fuller and Wilson, and in all that time they never invited me in for a conference.

"Apparently Fuller is disturbed by the fact that he reappointed Wilson and that people are wondering why, just as they are wondering why Wilson selected Garrett.

"Possibly Fuller was in Europe buying pictures when the prosecution of police officers began."

He repeated how inspectors attached to his office conducted an investigation that disclosed police criminality and that he went to then Governor Fuller and asked aid. Two State police officers were assigned to the investigation and one was arrested by the Boston police for assault and battery on a bootlegger.

MORE FIREWORKS

With both Fuller and O'Brien eager to be witnesses, the Garrett hearings resuming Monday promise a new display of fireworks. Fuller will travel any distance in order to appear, he stated.

"I expect and hope to have the chance of being a witness before Atty.-Gen. Warner and to tell my story," he said. "Of course, Mr. O'Brien could and should have called a grand jury and indicted and prosecuted those police officers and others against whom he had evidence of criminality.

"He did not have to wait on the Governor for a conference regarding any such action.

"I will be a witness before Atty.-Gen. Warner with bells on. No matter where I am at the time, I will get there as soon as I am given the opportunity to testify."

A first hand version of the investigation he ordered into the affairs of Garrett in 1928, his reasons for and the result of his action, are expected when the former Governor faces his old political enemy, Atty.-Gen. Warner.

This investigation has been made an important phase of the present inquiry into the activities of Garrett while he ruled as "czar" of the police headquarters liquor squad.

TO TELL OF PROBE

Evidence has indicated that Fuller at the time was deceived into believing that the unusual personal wealth of Garrett was due to the fact that the rotund head of the member of the family of the wealthy William M. Wood of Andover. It has since been definitely disclosed, however, that Garrett's wife was not connected with the Wood family of Andover.

Fuller's statement over the phone follows in part:

"Police Commissioner Wilson was right and told the truth when he testified that O'Brien did not attend the conference arranged so that charges against Garrett and other police officers, about which there was so much noise, could be taken up.

"When my attention was called to these charges while I was governor, I summoned Mr. Wilson to my office and instructed him to be present at a conference to be arranged among us. Mr. O'Brien was notified of the conference. He said he would be there. Commissioner Wilson was notified of the conference, and he, too, stated that he would be there.

O'BRIEN ABSENT

"On the day set for the conference at my office, Commissioner Wilson appeared on time, Mr. O'Brien did not arrive. We waited for Mr. O'Brien, but he did not show up."

That Commissioner Wilson said is true. We waited for Mr. O'Brien but he ran out of the conference. To everything Mr. O'Brien has stated I want to say he is a liar."

The controversy between officials into which Fuller was injected had its inception months ago. At that time, O'Brien charged that all accusations brought out by Atty.-Gen. Warner had been made before Fuller while he (O'Brien) was district attorney of Suffolk County.

Fuller declined to reply to the charges, stating that he would take care of O'Brien at the proper time.

On the witness stand at the State House Tuesday, Commissioner Wilson said that he did not pay any attention to O'Brien's charges of corruption on the police department because O'Brien had "run out" on a conference called by Governor Fuller.

Two witnesses were questioned at the Attorney-General's office this morning. One was Simon L. Roberts of Columbus ave., a former bellman at the Hotel Bitz, and the other was William Gottaman, the taxi-driver who testified on Thursday that John F. Sullivan told him he was paying graft to police, but who had a poor memory for the names of the recipients of that graft.

There is a possibility that Gottaman will be recalled. Roberts was questioned by Atty. Arthur F. Rickford, told newspapermen he "didn't know anything."

Statement of William C Crawford, junior state chemist, that he will not be the goat, has deepened the mystery of the missing liquor records and developed a three-cornered feud at the State House.

Crawford was transferred yesterday back to the Health Department's shell fish hatchery at Lawrence after working for three weeks at the attorney general's office checking over liquor analyses.

Coincidental with Crawford's transfer, conflicting statements relative to the mystery emanated from the offices of Atty.-Gen. Warner and Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow.

Regardless of the import of the missing records to the Garrett investigation, Dr. Bigelow intends to prosecute his investigation, however long it may take, he declared last night. He made this statement in response to an inquiry as to whether or not he would drop his probe if the mystery failed of solution by the time Atty.-Gen. Warner made his report to the Legislature on Garrett on May 1, as required by the legislative resolve.

"Only death will deflect me," he asserted.

HAD BEEN OPENED

"Furthermore," he continued, "they were checked over again about half an hour before they were taken from the food and drug department to the attorney-general's office. They might have been extracted during that half hour.

"When the missing records of October, 1927, were discovered, we immediately noted that the wrapping paper in which they were enclosed was reversed. When originally packed a notation of the contents was made on the outside of the package.

"When they were later found the notation was on the inside of the wrapping paper. Then again the records during the three months they had been filed away had made well defined creases in the wrapping paper. When the package was recovered the creases did not fit the contents, and were mute evidence that some of the records had been removed."

A woman expected to give sensational testimony at the hearings next Monday was also closeted with Warner's aides. She was accompanied by her attorney who, upon return to his office, received a telephoned threat and an order to "lay off" the Garrett case. As a result the attorney-general arranged for protection for the attorney and his client.

This unidentified witness is said to be a former keeper of a house in the South End and alleges that she paid graft to a woman who represented a police officer and collected money for him from a chain of disorderly houses.

The latter woman is now under federal indictment for white slavery and is the wife of a man also under indictment for a similar offense.

The keeper of the house questioned is said to be very bitter because, although she paid graft, her house was raided regularly. Her story is expected to throw some lurid highlights onto police relations with white slave operators.

Atty.-Gen. Warner said today the public hearing when resumed on Monday would start at 2 p. m., and the testimony of the several witnesses to be heard would be corroborative of testimony already in the record.

Missing—Two Lions

POLICE STAGE A LION HUNT

Brighton police were today engaged in a lion hunt, the first held in Boston for many years.

The excitement and terror which would naturally attend a search for two of the kings of the jungle was missing, however, for the lions are of concrete.

Nevertheless, that fact does not lift any weight from the shoulders of the Sherlock Holmes of the Brighton division, because the disappearance of two concrete lions, weighing 400 pounds each, is a serious matter.

The detectives traveled hither and yon throughout the district, peering into likely and unlikely nooks where their query might lurk, and asking if anyone had seen two stone lions.

The lions were taken from 204 Allston st., Allston, where with four others they adorned the space in front of an apartment house.

Police are trying to determine how they were removed, and by whom. They have practically eliminated the local youths, because removing 800 pounds of stone lions would be too hefty a prank for them.

Every Nation in Geneva Conference Shifts Blame as Evil Grows

This second of a series of six articles on the dope evil reveals the operations of a world-wide network of illicit drug syndicates.

By G. W. L. DAY

London, April 12—Torn between jealousy of national interests and fear of the enormous proportions of the illicit traffic, the delegates at Geneva, where the League of Nations committee on opium and narcotics met this winter, have fenced and parried with the skill of trained diplomats. No nation is entirely innocent of blame, just as no nation is free from grave danger.

The public, reading reports of this intricate drama, feels vaguely uneasy. There are so many disturbing contradictions. China, we are told, has now suppressed opium production yet enormous supplies of Chinese opium are in circulation. British India is flooding China with opium.

Japan, so her representative assures, absorbs all her output of manufactured drugs; yet British India is being deluged with cocaine, and the contraband bears Japanese marks and letterings.

France and Switzerland are repeatedly whitewashed by their delegates; yet Russell Pasha is able to show us two or three drug factories in those countries which have turned egypt into a nation of addicts.

It will be seen that the outlook is extremely disquieting. The health committee of the League of Nations has estimated that seven grains of raw opium per head is a generous annual allowance for the medical and scientific needs of the 744,000,000 inhabitants of the world who come within the scope of doctors and labratories.

This makes the world's legitimate allowance of raw opium about 310 tons. Actually the amount produced every year is at least 8000 tons.

In Canada the situation is extremely serious, especially among the younger generation.

The prisons of the United States are overflowing with dope addicts, and in South America, cocainism is gaining grounds rapidly.

that they have been scratched with sharp nails. It would indicate the assaults have been committed by a child."

Dr. Bowman declared that many children will attack those younger and weaker than themselves simply for the satisfaction they derive in making them cry.

Most of the slashings have occurred in the vicinity of Nonantum sq., but a careful watch is to be maintained by the mothers' vigilance committee in all sections of the city for the elusive slasher.

MOTHERS ON GUARD

"Saturday afternoon is the big shopping time. Hundreds of babies must be left in their carriages while mothers scurry from store to store in the shopping district," Mrs. Rubin said today.

"A vigilance committee of mothers is the only way to stop this practice that is born, without a doubt, in a fiendish mind. And God help whoever it is, if any mother lays hands on him or her. Mothers won't stand for their innocent babies being mutilated."

She suggested that any affairs of this kind be reported immediately to the police.

"The police, anxiously trying to stop this latest activity, surely cannot be expected to know of the happenings unless they get a report," she said.

Most of the slashings have occurred in the vicinity of Nonantum sq., but a careful watch is being kept on all sections of the city to guard against the cunningness of who police agree is a fiend.

Another appeal for mothers to keep as cool as possible should babies be found slashed, was given by Mrs. Rubin, in order that the proper alarm may be given at the right time and thereby assist the police or volunteers in the capture of the wrongdoer.

About the soul we know nothing, except that it exists and will live happily or otherwise ever afterward.

As to the body, dipping it into the River Ganges, on which corpses float, and a route which deadly diseases travel westward, is certainly not a purifying process.

DELEGATES SEE DRAFT OF NAVY PACT TONIGHT

Experts Conclude First Pattern for the "Big Five" Chiefs to O. K. Monday

London, April 12 (AP)—The first draft of the London naval agreement was being prepared today with a view to its submission to the five delegations before midnight.

Progress was made by the drafting and expert committees today and it was indicated at St. James Palace that it would be possible to conclude a rough draft for consideration by the various delegates over the week end.

Several points of difference are yet to be cleared up including the so-called safeguarding clauses to protect the navies limited under the treaty in the event that neighboring nations whose navies are unlimited should begin what might be regarded as excessive building.

Only the experts' reports, not yet approved by the conference, are being used as a basis for the pact, but the work can proceed over the week-end on the assumption that it will be approved by the plenary session Monday.

Dwight W. Morrow is chairman of the drafting committee.

CURLEY FIGHTS TO HAVE GOLD STAR MOTHERS SAIL FROM BOSTON

WASHINGTON OFFICIALS BLAMED

Wire Convinces Mayor That U. S. Lines Have Not Broken Promise

Evidence of "buck passing" on the part of the War Department, in connection with the embarkation of Gold Star Mothers from this port, was seen today when Mayor Curley received a telegram stating the United States Lines have not changed their original position.

Although the War Department claimed the United States Lines were to blame for not sending a boat here, officials assured the Mayor the only reason they have not kept their promise to him is because the War Department withholds permission.

Joseph E. Sheedy, executive vice-president of the United States Lines wired the mayor:

"Your telegrma received on the eve of my departure for Europe. Our position is in no way changed. Will write you fully.

WILL STIR 'EM UP

Convinced that the shipping concern had not broken its promise, Mayor Curley announced he will send a wire to the War Department on Monday which will "stir them up."

His entrance into the fight being waged by the Boston Evening American to force the War Department to embark the New England Gold Star delegation at Boston not only puts the official sanction of the city on the proposal but also implies the support of port authorities.

The Mayor explained that an official of the United States Lines had promised that ships would call at Boston for New England Gold Star mothers. He sent the following telegram to Joseph E. Sheedy, executive vice-president of the steamship company, in New York:

"Am given to understand by the War Department that the reason the Massachusetts Gold Star mothers cannot sail from Boston is that you refuse to send your steamers here.

"This is contrary to the promise made to me by Mr. Chapman. I will be glad to have your explanation."

NEW PROTESTS

New protests against the choice of New York as the port of embarkation have been registered by Max Singer, commander of the department of Massachusetts, Veterans of Foreign Wars, who sent a statement to Secretary of War Hurley, and Miss Anne M. Mannix, department president of the American Legion auxiliary.

"I was very much surprised to find out that the War Department was going to insist that the Gold Star mothers from New England depart for France from New York port," said Singer in his communication to Secretary Hurley.

"I certainly think that, due to the age of many of the New England Gold Star mothers, they should be allowed to sail from Boston on this pilgrimage to France," said Miss Manion, at the state House today. "Then, too, a great number of them are in failing health and, surely, everything possible should be done for them."

MOON VOYAGE IS DESCRIBED BY PROFESSOR

Says Man Will Devise Way to Make It in Huge Sphere Driven by Cannon

New York, April 12 (AP)—Dr. John Q. Stewart, associate professor of astronomical physics at Princeton University, believes that a dozen decades hence man may travel to the moon.

By 2030 he said, a speed of 1000 miles an hour will be possible and by the year 2050 man will have developed a means of traveling at the rate of 50,000 miles an hour.

He described a possible ship for a lunar voyage as a sphere, hurling with cannon, which would be propelled into space after the manner of a rocket.

Such a ship he said would weigh about 70,000 metric tons. It would carry a crew of 60 and a group of scientists.

Dr. Stewart said the moon-ship would shoot out of the earth's atmosphere at the rate of 200 miles an hour. After two hours and 20 minutes, he estimated, discharges from the earthward cannon could be stopped and the ship would travel toward the moon at the rate of 190 miles a minute.

Cannon would be fired to cushion the drop of the sphere onto the moon's surface.

The voyagers would find themselves on a satellite which is airless, waterless and lifeless. Gravity of the moon being only one-sixth of that on the earth, men would be able to carry several hundred pounds of apparatus to provide air and regulate the temperature. They would travel in garb similar to diving suits, Dr. Stewart said.

U. S. BOY VICTOR ON THAMES

minutes 29 seconds made by Oxford in 1911.

The historic event was witnessed by the usual huge throng lining both banks of the river and on craft along the racecourse.

It was raining hard as the race progressed and the riverside was black with umbrellas.

It was one of the hardest fought races these ancient rivals have rowed.

Oxford apparently put every ounce of strength into the earlier stages, but became exhausted just after three miles, Cambridge finished comparatively fresh.

Winning "Coxie" Former Concord Schoolboy

New York, April 12 (AP)—A diminutive American youth with a powerful bass voice, who came here from Concord, Mass., steered the Cambridge shell to victory over Oxford today.

He is Robert Edgerton Swartwout, 24 years old, weighing 105 pounds and one of the lightest coxswains in the history of the Oxford-Cambridge regatta.

His father, Edgerton Swartwout, New York architect, remarked his son's powerful bass voice had a great deal to do with the youth landing a place in the crew.

"This, of course," he said, "is a big advantage for a coxswain, especially over there where the coxies do not use megaphones.

"Robert used to sing some, and also does considerable speaking in the Cambridge Union."

Young Swartwout went to Cambridge six years ago directly from Middlesex School, Concord, Mass., and is doing research work in English literature.

His father, a Yale graduate of 1891, was a classmate of the father of "Ox" Kingsbury, former Yale oarsman who rowed for Oxford in 1927.

'DRY' CAMPAIGN SURE BY MRS. M'CORMICK

Announces She'll Have Plenty to Say About Prohibition and Backing Hoover

Washington, April 12—Ruth Hanna McCormick, the Republican nominee for Senator from Illinois, will run for that office as a dry.

A question concerning the "wet" stand of her Democratic opponent, former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, elicited the response:

"I have always been dry and there is no reason to change."

She promised that she would have "plenty to say" on the prohibition subject when the campaign gets into full swing next fall.

Mrs. McCormick was interviewed early last evening after a long conference with President Hoover. She said she was entirely with the President on his law enforcement program, but that they had most amicably agreed to disagree on the question of American adhesion to the league court.

Mrs. McCormick "Agrees to Disagree" With Hoover

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN
Universal Service

Washington, April 12—President Hoover and I are in perfect unanimity on every point of my senatorial program except the League Court. On that we have agreed to disagree.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick thus summed up an hour's conference with President Hoover.

President Hoover is awaiting an opportunity to submit the League Court issue to the Senate, asking adherence.

Mrs. McCormick submitted the issue to the people of Illinois and she emphasized today she will continue to fight for entry to the League Court and stand against entangling alliances with Europe.

Ruth Hanna First to Ride Horses Astride in Georgia

Thomasville, Ga., April 12 (AP)—Old-timers here are not surprised to learn Ruth Hanna McCormick is in the saddle up in Illinois—for she was the first woman ever to ride astride a horse here.

It was about the dawn of the present century before side-saddles had gone the way of the crinoline.

They also recall many instances of her kindness when she was still Ruth Hanna. She saw a negro driver en route to Florida in a covered wagon drawn by white horses in the early days of the century. Mrs. Hanna went in a livery stable, bought a new wagon and two stairway horses and traded them for the others, which she gave to Judge Wm. H. Harris, directing they be killed in and their misery.

BANDIT GETS $30,000 GEMS

Newark, N. J., April 12 (AP)—A two-gun hold-up man today overpowered two men in the office of Zeithing & Co., jewelry manufacturers, and escaped with merchandise valued at between $30,000 and $40,000.

William H. Zeithing, president of the firm, told the police the loot was in gold and platinum jewelry, loose diamonds and other precious stones. The plant is in the heart of Newark's jewelry manufacturing district.

Opening the office door, Zeithing said he was confronted by an unmasked man with a gun in both hands.

"Open the door all the way and be quiet," Zeithing said he was told.

At that moment C. K. Munn son-in-law and employe of Zeithing, walked in. Both men were ordered to lie on the floor while the robber trussed them up. The robber scooped up the valuables from an open vault and escaped.

DRY AGENT IS SHOT TO DEATH

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Lamar W. York, 36, a federal prohibition agent, was shot and killed here today by a man identified only as a negro he had arrested.

He had taken two negroes into custody on a liquor charge. They jerked away and ran, one of them turning and firing once. The prohibition agent was hit in the head.

Two negroes were subsequently arrested by Washington police in connection with the shooting.

HUB JEWS START PASSOVER

In common with their coreligionists scattered throughout the world, Jewish residents of Greater Boston begin celebration of the Feast of the Passover at sundown tonight.

Observance of the feast commemorates the deliverance of the Israelites from slavery under the Pharaohs and is primarily dedicated to thanksgiving services for the escape from Egypt.

The opening service tonight is known as the "Seder," during which the "Haggadah" is recited in all homes and synagogues.

The characteristic food throughout the week of Passover, which is brought to a close at sundown next Saturday, consists of unleavened bread by special process and eaten to remind the Jewish race of the hardships undergone by their forefathers in their flight out of Egypt.

The poor and needy receive special attention during Passover week. The Associated Jewish Charities annually take care of all who are not able to provide special food needed for the holidays and Seders will be held in the various institutions supported by Jewish philanthropy.

HARVARD BOYS BIKES FOR SALE

New York, April 12 (AP)—Three Harvard students who achingly pedaled three bicycles all the way down from Boston in less than two days, decided today the horses were for sale. They never wanted to mount a bicycle again, they said.

Austin T. Gray, 20, said somebody at the Harvard A. T. Club bet him, John B. Ames, 22, of North Easton, Mass., and Kenneth G. Pender, 20, of Sioux Falls, S. D., that the trip couldn't be negotiated in 48 hours.

They covered lots of about $30 apiece, and started out at 5 a. m. Thursday and at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon brought their dusty mounts up in front of Gray's home in Park ave. Gray said they would go back to Cambridge tomorrow night—by train.

CALLS STEEL CO. G. O. P. 'PET'

Washington, April 12 (AP)—Charges that the United States Steel Corporation is the special beneficiary of the Republican administration were made here today in a statement issued by Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee.

Representative Byrns cited as an example of his claim the conference agreement on the pig iron schedule of the tariff bill restoring the House rate of $1.125 per ton on pig iron. The Senate had cut the House rate to 75 cents.

"The huge profits and heavy dividend distributions are evidence that the Steel Trust does not need such tariff protection," Byrns said, adding that "the tariff bounty bestowed is collected in higher prices to consumers of hardware, cutlery, farm machinery and every other product of iron and steel."

SUIT WON BY VAPORUB

Philadelphia, April 12—A court decision in which protection of the buying public is emphasized has just been handed down by Judge Thompson of United States District court in the case of Vick Chemical Co. against Frederick E. Strohmeier and involving alleged fraudulent use of the plaintiff's trade name, Vicks VapoRub, by the defendant. The Vick Chemical Co. is upheld.

The case grew out of the action of Strohmeier in marketing a cough drop which he claimed, on the package, was "Medicated with Vicks VapoRub." As to this alleged medication, Judge Thompson says in his decision:

"I find from the medical testimony that, as manufactured, there is no real medication by means of Vicks VapoRub in the defendant's product."

MARSH URGES 'CLEAN UP' OF CITY

By NANCY BREWSTER

An appeal to the City Federation of Women's Clubs to "clean up" our affairs was made by President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University at the annual Federation luncheon at Hotel Statler.

"If dirty alleys were the only things that are dirty in Boston the situation would be comparatively simple," Dr. Marsh said. "But if I read the newspapers correctly there is worse dirt in city affairs than that."

"God give us public spirited men whom the spoils of office cannot buy; men who will not lie; men who have a conscience in the conduct of the affairs of this great city. Men like that are demanded at a time like this. We must have them."

For the first time in history Governor Allen has undertaken "to start public works before the money has actually been appropriated, Leverett Saltonstall, speaker of the House, told the Federation gathering.

"This is to alleviate the unemployment situation in this State," he explained. "Hundreds of men will be put to work sooner than by waiting for the $4,000,000 to be voted. The State will spend $12,000,000 on highways alone this year."

This Modern World

Edited by ANN ARDEN

A Department Devoted to Fashions, Decorations and Social Customs

THERE may be in a wardrobe just one ensemble costume—but there are sure to be, if chic all day long every day is the aim, several ensembled accessory sets. For matched accessories indicate that one has had a color and texture plan—and they bring out the best points of the major ensemble.

Fancy, for instance, a monotone tweed frock or suit not being the better for the complement of a set of striped accessories. To supply a vivid note, the beret, scarf and bag featuring stripes matching or contrasting with the costume can add change and variety.

The suit of flecked wool tweed for sports and general town wear pictured is a very dashing affair and purple combination, exceedingly practical and well-tailored.

THE skirt is circular, with intricate shaped and gored sections. The finger-tip-length coat is geometrically cut and seamed, has link cuffs, and small slit pockets. The silk scarf, repeating the purple and white tone of the suit, is run through a band of the coat material at back of collar and under buttoned lapels. The blouse is of crepe satin, its round collar tucked to fit neckline closely, groups of tucks down center front caught with buttoned tabs.

The draped straw turban and one-strap pumps are correct accessories.

WHETHER it is the influence of post bellum fashions (the particular bellum in this case being the one known as the Civil War) or whether it is merely the fact that going South from the North brings back an old fashion—carpet bags are coming back into style. There are large, open, double-handled bags made of cotton or woolen tweed. These capacious bags are expected to be much used with tweed costumes.

The flannel bag is also forecast for summer wear. This a soft and roomy, frameless bag, covered and lined with flannel. The infinite variety of colors possible in this type of accessory makes it very appropriate for spring and summer ensembles.

A PARIS couturier has made up a perfume for tweeds alone. Lucien Lelong calls this scent simply "J." Jasmine and hyacinth are both suggested by this fragrant accessory to the tweed costume. Here is an idea for the woman who enjoys perfumes. A special scent for the costume. For satins, a smooth, rather Oriental, perfume; for filmy tulle and chiffon, a delicate flower odor; for sports tweeds and jersey, a fresh spring-like fragrance—the possibilities are practically limitless.

HAWKS MAY FLY AT BIG AIR MEET

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Capt. Frank M. Hawks and Lieut. James H. Doolittle may attend the New Bedford air meet, scheduled for one week from today.

Harland F. Banks, head of the National Air Pageant Association, who is in charge of the two-day dedication of the new Round Airways airport in East Fairhaven, today states that the only thing that will keep Hawks away from the meet is a possible trip to the west coast.

Invitations to the meet race host not to every rambling commercial flier in New England and acceptances are being received from most of them. Probably 20 planes will be on the airport when the first event is started, at noon, April 19.

An exhibition of gliding will be given on Sunday, with a soaring plane owned by the American Motorless Aviation Company, whose school at Wellfleet is scheduled to open shortly.

In order to keep the spectators informed of the various manoeuvres of the planes, an elaborate public address system has been installed with an announcer on duty. This address system is the first permanent installation of its kind on any airport in New England.

The night aerial program has not been definitely decided, but will be announced by Banks within a few days. It is certain, however, that there will be a night parachute jump.

DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 70

Today we come back to clocks—always an interesting topic. Everybody owns at least one clock. Some folks have them by the dozens. Their variety of form and workmanship whether modern or antique makes an appeal to the eye. The voice of the clock though produced by mechanism, is not mechanical. Every clock has its own personality.

The clock shown today is over 180 years old. It is a wall clock, run by brass weights, and has wooden works. It is owned by Miss Charles Leslie of 56 Rowe st., Roslindale.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. SALT WAR LIKE STAMP TAX

India's revolt against the English salt tax is comparable to our own protest against the British stamp tax before the Revolution, in the opinion of Rupert Emerson, Harvard professor, who has made an extensive study of conditions in India.

Ghandi's reason for choosing the salt tax as the basis for his revolt, Emerson believes, is because it is a simple one to violate. They make salt by a ceremonial process and thus break the law while giving the act religious significance.

The East Indians are taxed 1¼ rupees per one maund. A rupee is approximately 37 cents in our money and a maund about 82 pounds. The viceroy, appointed by the British for a period of five years, controls the tax.

It is a very important fact that the mass of people in this uprising in India are illiterate. With a population of approximately 320,000,000, India has between 15 per cent and 20 per cent of the world's people.

Among the leaders, there is a very considerable difference of opinion as to what they want. Ghandi wants to overthrow a large part of Western civilization in India. Other leaders believe India's salvation must come through a sensible adaption of Western improvements.

MAKING THE CLIENTELE TO ORDER

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE must be something in this subscription business. The New York Theater Guild is crammed with information on the subject—as well as comfortably wrapped up in its excellent profits. Scorned by the mighty and belittled by the lesser satellites of the drama, the Theater Guild has plodded its own rough road and wrested prosperity from pastures which the great magistrates of the playhouses solemnly vowed were dry and barren.

ALL of which may be accepted in some degree as an indication that the master minds of the drama might take a lesson or two in theater economics from these earnest folk they had variously referred to as upstarts, dreamers and, worst of all, incompetents; merely children stumbling about in the dark. But the Theater Guild was not entirely composed of excited adolescents; nor were its leaders without torches to light the way. There was a selling plan for the spoken drama in the deep corner of every Guild mind. It was a simple thing, too, and, as it has turned out, exactly the right medicine for the sinking patient. And so, by hands untried at the arts, came the subscription list, which, reduced to its finality, first finds the audience and then brings on the play.

Nicholas Young

THE enterprising Shubert Freres, with majestic temples in every town, and attractions by the score moving thither and yon, though among the original scoffers on the side lines, were quick to sense the importance of catching an audience in advance and holding it for weeks to come. Another Guild had taught a good lesson. Incidentally, it had picked up a few apt pupils. So, as they say in the movies, came the dawn, and with it the Victor Herbert Festival, presented on the well known, but formerly detested, subscription plan.

NEXT in order came the Chicago stage Dramatic League, fostered, bolstered and promoted by the Messrs. Shubert; and finally the Professional Players of Philadelphia. As Randolph Hartley, spokesman for the latter group so aptly puts it, the playgoer now turns life-saver for the distressed theater. The Professional Players propose to take Boston in hand in the autumn. Already the advance couriers have arrived and are plotting the community for an interesting subscription campaign. The plays will not arrive until October, but they have been carefully selected for their artistic merit. In the meantime, audiences will be gathered—for that matter they are already making advance payments.

FRANKLY, there is great virtue in the undertaking. By no other means than a well ordered and sanely controlled subscription idea could Boston be assured of twenty-four consecutive weeks of the season's best plays in one theater. And that is what these ardent apostles of better drama are striving for.

Romance Thrives Best When Wit Tempers the Play and Beauty Teams Up With Talent

EVELYN HERBERT

MISS HERBERT has beauty that makes all hearts flutter. She has ability also, and so her work in "The New Moon" at the Shubert is most admirable. She would adorn any stage anywhere.

JOSEPH ALLEN AND GEORGE M. COHAN

THERE MAY BE many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip, but there is never a lack of entertainment in "The Tavern," at the Tremont. The famous Mr. Cohan has an able aide in Mr. Allen.

JANE TAYLOR

MISS TAYLOR plays in "Little Accident" at the Plymouth. She is an attractive girl who knows how to turn out a finished piece of acting. The comedy is brimful of laughs.

Intentness

NATALIE MOORHEAD

MISS MOORHEAD helps with the clues in "The Benson Murder Case" at the Uptown.

ADVENTURE IS FOUND NEAR THE CORNER

THERE are few men now prominent in the theater who have had such an extensive schooling as George M. Cohan in the mysteries of the stage. There are even fewer who have deliberately refused to confine their activities to a specialized field.

Those few rebellious souls who lament the increasing standardization of the stage must toss some of their nosegays of approbation at the man once known to the theatergoers as "Master Georgie Cohan." Born in a day when the theater was at best a hazardous pursuit, he has persistently refused to accept it as more than a grand adventure. Endowed with immense curiosity, Mr. Cohan has turned his hand to practically every one of the many functions of show business and, finding himself apt at most of them, he has jealously guarded the distinction of being the most versatile of our dramatic practitioners.

His most recent activity in the theater has set his admirers wondering if he intends to inaugurate a new system of play presentation, a la repertory. He came to Boston with "Gambling," a drama he'd had a long and successful season. From various sources he was asked if he ever intended to revive "The Tavern," his celebrated satire of ten years ago. That gave him an idea. The "Gambling" cast would be excellent in the various roles of the satire, so he set about rehearsing them and they are giving performances nightly at the Tremont of "The Tavern," with the matinees given over to "Gambling."

USES PAINTS TO WIN FAME

LAUREL leaves thickly crown Richard Whorf's brow these days. Not yet arrived at his 25th birthday, he has already an enviable record at the Copley, where he has created a long series of important parts for E. E. Clive, ranging from the hero to the comedy relief. He has written plays. Also, "Runnin' the Show," an anthology of backstage secrets. And Whorf's name on the title page, with a sequel provisionally titled "Time to Make Up," to come off the press in June. This month finds still another of Whorf's talents winning recognition. The Myles Standish Galleries have been thronged the past few days with art-lovers, for the first public showing of Whorf's black and whites and paintings.

Richard Whorf

"I am a bundle of incongruities," said a famous Thespian.

And Whorf is just that. He is actor, artist, author, playwright, musician, technician, genius of the gentle art of make-up—there's no field, apparently, even remotely connected with the stage and its life that he hasn't discovered.

The New Play

COPLEY—"Dear Old England," a comedy by H. F. Maltby. The story of haughty nobility in financial distress. E. E. Clive will head the cast. Included in the supporting company are Elspeth Dudgeon, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Roberts, Esther Mitchell, Ian Emery and Francis Compton. Staged by Mr. Clive.

THOUGH CRUTCHES BE NEEDED, STILL 'ON WITH THE DANCE!'

THERE is pathos underlying the dance which Fred Stone does so nimbly with the aid of a pair of crutches in his new musical extravaganza, "Ripples," which Charles Dillingham is presenting at the Colonial on Monday, April 21. Although the happy-go-lucky comedian does his best not to let anyone see it, the pathos is still there.

THE sight of Fred Stone on crutches seems to bring too closely to mind the airplane accident and the attendant suffering which threatened to remove this American playboy, the survivor of the noted team of Montgomery and Stone, from the stage. "Aw, shush—gosh," he remarks in his characteristic way, "it shouldn't have happened at all. I was turned loose too soon, I guess. I had only done 20 hours of solo flying, and I thought I was a wise guy already. I thought I knew all the tricks, but I didn't."

Fred Stone

Flying and its adventuresomeness fascinate Stone, who all his life had been very much of an outdoor man. He would fly again if permitted.

But he shakes his head humorously, and a bit sadly. He bows to the inevitable. Mrs. Stone and his daughters won't hear of him flying again or as much as going near the cockpit of an airplane.

Last winter, when he started for Florida for a period of resting and mending with his brother-in-law, Rex Beach, the writer, Stone got as far as Miami, and if they were encased in plaster casts. How they could become invisible on so short a time is a striking tribute to the comedian's resourcefulness and his will to be up and doing. In a 12-month he has almost achieved the impossible.

But it's part of Fred Stone's philosophy of life to overcome obstacles and keep smiling in face of them. It is the message of his comedy, his dancing and his stage presence today.

A slightly grayer and graver Fred Stone he is now than that he was of old, but his heart is still as gay and as full of fun as it was in the days when he appeared with Dave Montgomery in "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Red Mill."

Home, Sweet Home Brew, Yo-Ho!

EUGENIE LEONTOVICH

* ARTIST SCHMIDT sketches his impressions of Miss Leontovich in "Candle-Light" at the Wilbur. Undoubtedly the bottles contain some sort of tempting beverage. Guess what it is!

FILM TO TAKE PLAY AFAR

DURING the present engagement of "Little Accident" at the Plymouth, a "film matinee" will be given with the exception of a moving picture operator and an individual with a large phonograph, there will be no audience; yet the entire performance will be given in its entirety. All the players will wear their costumes, and every line and bit of business will be given.

All this sounds strange, but the explanation is simple. For Crosby Gaige, the producer of this hilarious comedy, has disposed of the Australian rights to Thomas McIntosh. Mr. McIntosh was very desirous of giving an exact duplicate performance in the Antipodes and so has taken this method of obtaining a complete mechanical, but at the same time, perfect representation of the play.

The moving picture will show each and every detail of the action, while the phonograph will catch the lines and pick up each inflection and intonation. So that by the combined means of the moving picture and phonographic matinee, Mr. McIntosh will be able to rehearse the play just as it is being performed by Thomas Mitchell, the creator of the principal role, and by the supporting cast.

Burlesque Repertory Coming to the Howard

The Old Howard will offer something new in the field of burlesque beginning Monday, April 28. There will be a stock company of 12 principals and a chorus of 24. This will be the largest and best ever offered at the Howard. Many stars have been secured, including LaBelle Marie, Opal Oakley, Fred (Falls) Binder and Mike Sacks.

COUGHS JUST THE SIGNAL FOR TEARS

ONE cough is a warning, but two coughs are a danger signal to Francine Larrimore. Even with the most severe cold or throat affection, nobody will cough through anything he is really anxious to hear, but will time his barks to the unimportant scenes and lines of the play. So says Miss Larrimore, who is appearing in John Golden's production, "Let Us Be Gay," coming to the Hollis, April 21.

"If there is one rough, all I can do about it is repeat the line, if it is a good one," says Miss Larrimore. "But if that person in the audience coughs twice I've got to 'put my foot on it' and get him. And I can get him. That's my business."

In "Let Us Be Gay," for instance, in which Miss Larrimore appeared at the Little Theater, New York, for 14 months, there was great difficulty in keeping the late-coming society folk from drowning out the quiet but important prologue. Silence was requested in the program, ushers were put up and polite warnings were voiced by the ushers, but all to no avail.

Rachel Crothers, author of the play, and Miss Larrimore put their heads together.

"Maybe you're not so good in that scene," said Miss Crothers bluntly.

The scene is a boudoir where a young wife, having just learned of her husband's unfaithfulness, lies sobbing on a lace-canopied bed. It suddenly dawned upon Miss Larrimore that if the first sob of the neglected wife was good enough the audience would hush up and listen to her.

JOY ON STAGE, JINXES TOO

SHOW folks are notoriously superstitious. Accepting two-dollar bills, whistling in a dressing room, lighting three cigarettes with one match are dire portents of bad luck. There are probably just as many good luck omens, too, and show business has its full share of "lucky names." All of which points to "Candle-Light," sprightly comedy now playing at the Wilbur. "Candle-Light" can proudly boast of a lucky name, none other than P. G. Wodehouse.

Lucky names in the theater are names which consistently have been associated with hits. De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, Schwab and Mandel, Al Jolson, Eddie Canter—these are but a few of the theater world's lucky names. And P. G. Wodehouse very definitely has a place in this list of sure-fire names.

For several years Mr. Wodehouse's inexhaustible wit has kept the American public laughing at the series of short stories and novels that have come from his pen. His name is now known everywhere.

Yiddish Players Open in "Beggar's Daughter"

Leon Blank and Betty Frank will open a one week's engagement at the Franklin Park Theater, Dorchester, next Monday afternoon at 2:30. They will appear in the Yiddish drama, "The Beggar's Daughter," all next week except Thursday. Their farewell appearance will be held on Sunday, April 20, on which day they will appear in "The Poor, Rich Orphan."

MR. LEGREE WAS NEVER LIKE THIS

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

WHEN the harassed heroine is between the devilish villain and the deep blue sea, what should the poor girl do? Milton Herbert Gropper conceived such a situation in developing a plot for a play. And because he pulled his thinking cap well down over his ears, Barbara Stanwyck leaps overboard from an ocean liner, speeding us to the finish of "Ladies of Leisure," at the New B. F. Keith's.

MR. GROPPER fashioned a drama which he submitted to David Belasco. He had outlined his basic threads to the great producer, the latter cocked his ear. A few days later he was reading the manuscript. His judgment was that here was a chance to keep folks lined up at the box office; moreover, the theme was one that appealed to him as opportunity to publicize the cause of helping the fallen woman. He staged the show. Folks did line up, and the box office simpleness were kept busy for months. Again was the Belasco genius full of stage wizardry. The electric lights carried the title as Ladies of the Evening, which was but a gentle euphemism, skeletons stalked in the closet behind the door of that name. The public sensed it, and if Mr. Belasco was astonished, Mr. Gropper stepped to the first rung of the ladder to success.

Milton H. Gropper

NEVER having been pursued by any villain we can't for the life of us say whether Miss Barbara in the photoplay decided wisely, or otherwise. Lady fans can answer, perhaps; and even they may be of two kinds. For the bold had one in this case is none other than Lowell Sherman, known to have many, many admirers among the women and girls. These will probably hold a brief few days of grace, then settle, and one who might be planning in the end to propose marriage. Of one thing there is no doubt. Mr. Sherman delivers a superb characterization and wins himself a good deal of sympathy that stage or screen villains are wont to get.

MOTION picture audiences will probably hear little of Mr. Gropper, so a few words about him as the playwright are not amiss at this time. His dad was a millionaire; making toys, and marbles such as the boys are playing with these spring days, built up the Gropper fortune. Dad wished his son to come into the industry. It might not be a romantic career, but it had big dollar signs along its highway. The son had another yearning than toward the factory and the executive offices. He wanted to win his own spurs—by writing. Dad was disappointed, but had to make the best of it. Milton Herbert turned to the drama, and was soon grinding out playlets.

'TOM SAWYER' TO COME BACK WITH DURKIN AS STAR

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 12.

FRECKLE-FACED Junior Durkin, who completely stole the show, "Courage," away from Janet Beecher on the stage in New York and is said to have repeated his excellent work in the screen version of the same play, will do a revival of "Tom Sawyer."

I am glad that Paramount is bringing back Mark Twain's hero for the youngsters certainly have little enough in the talkies to entertain them.

Jack Pickford, with the possible exception of "Seventeen," made the greatest screen success in "Tom Sawyer" some years ago.

The whole, some reason of the story of a parrot has been brought to the screen without any mention of it.

Let's hope it will be the same and it should be with John Cromwell directing.

Louella O. Parsons

WHAT a time Warner Baxter has had to find a leading lady to take Ruby Keeler's place in "Big Boy." Al Jolson's new picture. So much had been written and said about the necessity of having Al choose his wife for his leading lady. Then again, The way Warner Bax put right behind the petite Keeler didn't fit in the role at all. Test after test was taken. Finally Claudia Dell, film "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" was shown and Al and Jack Warner and Darryl Zanuck all in one breath said "viola." She's Fresno for them and it. So the matter was settled.

THERE will be no Hollywood honeymoon for Lupe Velez and Warner Baxter. The best he can do will be to spend three weeks in New York on his honeymoon. The Fox company intends to make hay while the sun shines and since Warner Bax just now been awarded the prize for the most distinguished male performance of last year he ought to be given pictures and more pictures. "Rasputin" by Eleanor Mercein, will be his first when he returns from his holiday in New York. Lina Basquette, well known playwright, and Lajos Biro, who is well known as a playwright, are coming to write the adaptation and dialogue and Alexander Corda will direct. Mr. Corda is too busy to make any comment on his wife's statement that she wants to remarry him. But knowing something of the Corda difficulties, I doubt very much if there will be a reconciliation.

MICKEY NEILAN had practically made up his mind that it was easier to write than direct when the offer came from Mack Sennett to direct his next picture. "Secrets." "Secrets" ought to be about right for Mickey, who, when he is at his best, knows how to direct scenes with comedy and pathos combined. Then, too, he ought to work well with Rainey Glazer, who is an expert wardrobe and who with Mickey Moseley selected and on the level, anyone can, it's whispered that Mary is looking for a leading English actor to play the role Eugene O'Brien played when he was Norma Talmadge's leading man.

EDDIE CANTOR and all the Cantor family are moving into Jesse Morgan's home in Beverly Hills. Byron, who writes stories of football, baseball and golf have you, leaves on a trip to Europe. The Cantor youngsters are crazy about Hollywood, especially its swimming pools. Eddie may be located at the United Artists Studios where he is having tests made for "Whoopee."

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Marilyn Miller dressed in a lavender evening frock, doing an impromptu dance at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Murray. Charlie Chaplin and Adolphe Menjou discussing the good old days of silent movies. Mrs. Menjou wearing a Parisian frock of lace. Anita Murray, pretty daughter of the hostess, wearing white. Julianne Sand wearing black, being given a welcome by her two country men, Edmund Golding and Charlie Chaplin. Blanche Sweet in a lavender and blue combination, reminiscing with Matt Moore. Bill Haines with his fascinating accent surrounded by a group of admirers. Jans Coolidge and her mother lunching at the Ambassador. That's all today. See you Monday.

LIPSTICK THE RIGHT THING IN JUNGLE

TWENTY years among sex-starved, fun-loving Irene, restless, roistering Irving in tents and huts, have not changed the feminine habits and desires of Ona, or otherwise Mrs. Martin Johnson, who with her husband, is soon to be seen and heard at the Repertory in their first talkie. It was made by the famous couple who spent their honeymoon among cannibals and have been studying wild men and wild animals ever since. The film will have its premiere next Saturday. "Across the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson" is the title. In it Mrs. Johnson will be seen making use of powder, lipstick and mirror.

The visitor to the Johnsons' cozy nipa-hut found his hostess in decidedly chic attire, with skirt and hair as well cared for as if she were in appointment distance of a beauty shop. Of course, when there is work to be done she has proper clothing for the trails, but even then, she is careful to protect her skin and hair.

When her husband is grinding his motion picture camera, Mrs. Johnson always is headed him gun in hand, ready for the ten thousand emergencies of the jungles.

Female of the Species Is Deadlier Than Male in Films

DOROTHY DE BORBA AND PAULINE STARKE

LITTLE MISS De Borba isn't camera shy at all. She and Miss Starke have roles in "A Royal Romance" at the Park. It's a story of love and adventure in Europe.

BERNICE CLAIRE

MISS CLAIRE sings and dances in "Spring Is Here" now at the Keith-Albee.

ARMIDA

MLLE ARMIDA stars with Tin Tin Tin in "On the Border" at the Scollay.

'TWAS WAR TO THE KNIFE

THERE were fifty casualties among the thousand Negroes engaged in a realistic battle staged in one of the big sequences of "Moulin," technicolor drama with music, now in its second week at the Modern and Beacon.

The sequence depicts an attack by the Negroes on the capital of a New African colonial town of New Pessin in which there is actual hand-to-hand fighting. It begins at the control of Director Al Rogell, after the men were aroused by actual bloodshed, and at least one man was killed in a duel of Hollywood policemen. The casualties consisted of the broken arms, legs, ribs, collar-bones, half a dozen bloody noses and innumerable minor cuts and bruises.

Captivating

VIOLET BUCKLEY

MISS BUCKLEY is a star with "Girls From Happyland" at the Gayety.

CAST IS JUST 'ARF 'N' 'ARF

THEATRE-GOING audiences have a chance to judge the merits of stage and screen transmission in viewing "Spring Is Here," now at the Keith-Albee. Half of the cast has been recruited from the old guard of the screen. Ines Courtney of "Good Time" fame is in New York, plays the part of baby sister Mary Jane Braley. Betty Braley, the older sister, is betrayed by Prince Claire, who played "Margot" in "The Desert Song" in New York, whereas Jerry Clayton is played by Alexander Gray, who appeared opposite Marilyn Miller in "Sally," and opposite Miss Claire in "The Desert Song."

On the screen side are such old timers as Ford Sterling of Mack Sennett Kops fame; Louise Fazenda, also of Sennett fame, plays his pitiful wife. Emily Lawrence Gray, who has played in pictures opposite Rebe Daniels, Gloria Swanson and Pola Negri, and Marion Davies.

Alexander Gray

WHO DID KILL COCK ROBIN?

IT is more difficult to film a detective mystery story than to write one, according to Bartlett Cormack, former newspaperman and successful playwright, who wrote the screen story for S. S. Van Dine's famous detective thriller, "The Benson Murder Case."

"The average reader, hurrying through a chapter misses many of the points that he would be quick to see if they were presented to him pictorially and audibly," says Cormack. "If the detective mystery novel or picture is honest it will present each clue that leads to the ultimate solution of the crime.

"In this way, the reader or audience is made one with the detective, and has an opportunity equal to his to solve the crime.

"But, when presented in a picture, the clues are never overlooked by the audience, as they frequently are in a book. This makes the filming of such a story a very difficult thing, for, to be entertaining, it must mystify. If the audience knows the guilty party before the time comes, for him to know, the whole thing is silly. The clues must be presented and covered up at the same time."

Coquettish

LOLA PIERCE

MISS PIERCE shines with the "Flapper Follies" burlesque at the Old Howard.

THE DIALOGUE IS ALL WOOL, YARD WIDE

THERE is one bit of dialogue that is far removed from fiction, in the John McCormack starring picture now at the Majestic, "Song o' My Heart," directed by Frank Borzage, now at the Majestic. The scene takes place in the New York office of a concert manager, portrayed by Edwin Mayo. Mansfield with McCormack and his accompanist, Edwin Schneider, conferring with Mansfield over the itinerary of a coast-to-coast tour. As they are leaving, Count Andre de Segurola forces his way into the office and tries to sell Mansfield the idea to team him up with McCormack on the concert tour.

"I have seeng with him in grand opera," persists de Segurola.

And this is the true part of it. Count de Segurola actually did sing with McCormack in the Metropolitan Opera Company. The count is now solely engaged in screen work.

PUP THE TRUE DOGSTAR

FROM a forlorn pup in the trenches of France to famous dog star in motion pictures is the career of Rin Tin Tin, seen in "On the Border," now making its first Boston showing at the Scollay Square Olympia. Found in a captured sector of Alsace-Lorraine by Lieutenant Lee Duncan of the aviation squadron, Rin Tin Tin was a puppy in a litter of five. He and one of his sisters were picked up by Duncan and named Rin Tin Tin and Nanette after a pair of French sweethearts who write the only surviving story of an air raid on a French town.

After the Armistice was signed, Lieutenant Duncan brought the dogs home. Nanette died a short time afterward, but Rinty made his life's work long as a friend of Duncan gave him a police dog which he also named Nanette. Now Rinty has his own home in Beverly Hills, California, and Nanette can be his master and teacher.

War Work Wins Girl Picture Opportunity

Although Nanette, daughter of the doughboys during the World War, had no added ambition to be a movie star, she was born to be Lassie. She became adept in relief work and was put in a company by provide entertainment. She took part in several of the amateur dramatic performances, and did it so successfully that she was advised to take up stage work professionally. Now a new opening in "Point of Diamonds" feature film at the Park.

GOOD EVEN TO BRASS RAIL

ADMINISTERING to the throats of men has become a noble work, Christian J. Frenk, moving picture actor. Several months ago he was cast in Paramount's all-talking classic, "The Virginian," as a bartender. But the manner in which he treats throats in "The Vagabond King," now at the Metropolitan, is not touchy to salutary, for he is seen as an executioner. He doesn't get a chance to show his prowess as the chief attendant at the gibbet, however, for the plot, abetted by several hundred medieval vagabonds, saves the hero from the noose which Frank prepared.

BROKERS LOOK FOR BIG BULL MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON

The majority of brokers appear to be looking for a big bull market during the summer months. A State at investment banker tells me he knows of several large New York houses with Boston branches who are offering their workers bonuses to take vacations at this time instead of later in the season. Certainly a number of Boston houses have been on a lot of additional help lately, and are confident of being able to keep their current forces and even of adding to them.

(Copyright by Bachrach) Eliot Wadsworth

Bull markets, not bear markets, require large working forces in brokerage houses.

Add to our list of corporations with 1930 business running ahead of that for 1929 the Gold Dust Corp. with both gross and earnings showing gains. Gold Dust made the greatest expansion in its history in 1929 by acquiring the Girard Milling Co. and purchase of a substantial stock interest in Swift-Canadian Packing Co. Armour & Lindsay Co. was acquired in December, 1928, so that last year was the first year of combined operation under Gold Dust management.

Stockholders, although generally supposed to be "partners," have for years had nothing whatever to say about "L" affairs than any Bay State voter. State of mind is generally think that they are selling below real values because of the political tinge to the road's affairs. A discussion of the subject, "The Boston Elevated Referendum — How Shall You Vote?" will be held in Robbins Memorial Town Hall, Arlington, on April 24, at 8 p. m. Elliott D. Barker and Eliot Wadsworth will speak on "Continuation of Public Control." Henry L. Shattuck will speak on "Public Ownership," and Eliot Wadsworth will speak on "Return to Private Ownership."

As previously noted in this column, members of the legal profession with a sense large part in Iowa this year as the result of corporation barrier. Hearings are now on the legality of the Lob. Inc. meeting, at which fists flew, will be begun April 18 at Wilmington, Del.

The executive committee of St. Louis Southwestern is writing stockholders about charges against the present management by Walter E. Meyer, a director, who circulated stockholders as chairman of a protective committee. The contest for control of Freeport Texas Co. ended in victory for the faction opposing the management, as between stockholders represented by John L. Walker and Lyon Fish mond, Va., and the management, headed by E. P. Swenson. The Moody-Boggiano syndicate, who joined with the Williams group are in the ultimate control and ownership of Duval Texas Sulphur Co., which operates a small deposit.

Management of Freeport Texas recently issued a three-year forecast of operations, prepared by Hacking & Sells, defending their conduct of the business. The forecast Texas showed net of $3,085,911 in year ended Nov. 30, 1929, equal to $4.28 a share on 729,813 no-par shares against $2,275,576, or $4.69 a share, in preceding year. In quarter ended Feb. 28 net was $1,007,781, equal to $1.38 a share. The stock pays $4 plus extras.

In addition to the Loft battle, Delaware is also involved in a proxy conflict. Counsel for United Aircraft & Transport Corp. declined to vote any proxies at the annual stockholders' meeting of National Air Transport Inc. It was indicated that United Aircraft would go before the chancery court and contest the legality of the meeting.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Bethlehem Steel merger plans have resulted in various court actions. Youngstown's annual meeting will be held April 22, and stockholders of April 5 will be entitled to vote thereat. The merger vote promises more court warfare.

FARM WAGES AT NEW LOWS

Washington, April 12 — Farm wages on April 1 were the lowest for that date since the bureau of agricultural economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, began to collect such data 19 years ago.

"This situation," says the bureau in a farm wage report just issued, "is reflected in the large larger supply of farm labor due to the small volume of industrial employment at the present time. The supply of farm hands on April 1 ranged from 10 per cent more than the demand in the North Atlantic States to 21 per cent more than the demand in the Far Western States."

The bureau's index of farm wages on April 1 was placed at 162 per cent of the 1910-14 five year pre-war average. This is about 3 points above the index on January 1, this year, and nearly 5 points below the index on April 1, a year ago. The demand for farm labor on April 1 is placed at 85 per cent of normal, whereas on April 1 a year ago, the demand was 90 per cent of normal.

Wages per month with board on April 1 ranged from $23.30 in the South Atlantic States to $53.00 in the Far Western States; wages per month without board ranged from $33.88 in the South Atlantic States to $77.27 in the Far Western States; wages per day with board ranged from $1.20 in the South Atlantic States to $2.55 in the North Atlantic States, and wages per day without board ranged from $1.57 in the South Atlantic States to $3.38 in the North Atlantic States.

Crying Need for Badminton Fans

Business Men Rally in Fight for Lower Tariff on Sport

Are you a good badminton enthusiast?

If so, you will want to report for duty at once to a committee of prominent Boston business men who are making a determined fight against customs duty affecting the sport.

At present the United States officials are connecting up per cent duty on the 12lb feathered ball, by calling it a "Dressed feather product. Boston enthusiasts contend that the item should be listed under sporting goods which carry only 30 per cent duty.

the question

The committee asking for volunteers consists of Ralph E. Thebetts, attorney; C. R. Hutchinson of the firm of Paine & Webber; and George F. Willard, coach of the game on the five courts at the University Club. They have retained Stone & Downer, customs and foreign commerce brokers, to handle the legal end.

A conference has been held with W. W. Lufkin, collector of the port, but he has no authority to change the rates. He informed the committee that the proper course was to appeal to the court of customs appeals, or to urge Congress to change the tariff law.

Steamship Notes

The Scythia is due in Boston at 8 a. m. from Liverpool and Galway, by way of Halifax.

The Eastern Steamship Company has called for bids, to be opened May 12, on the three steamships to be constructed. Capt. O'Donnell is a great believer in expansion. One of his new boats will cover Boston to St. Johns. A second will travel from New York to Yarmouth, while the third will make New York to Norfolk.

Bostonians sailing today for Bermuda on the motorship Bermuda of the Furness Bermuda Lines include Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Lovejoy, Dr. and Mrs. F. B. Grinnell, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mahoney, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Wells.

The Coast Guard is doing something unusual today in towing the Hamilton from Maine to the Green Shipyard in Boston, for Massachusett Institute of Technology. This ship is to be used in a scientific project to study marine life, so the Government is glad to contribute its towing services. The cutter Kickapoo, may arrrive late today with her charge. Seamen will follow the studies closely. One of the observations will be in regard to effects of marine insects on bottoms of wooden vessels.

Longshoreman's Gazette

CARL MORRISON, Editor

Vol. 1 No. 3

"Yes, this is the press room at the Customs Tower. Yes, this is the editor of the Longshoreman's Gazette.

A gruff voice was snarling at us. "Look here, you blasted landlubber. I'm Davy Jones, calling from my locker by radio telephone. Your paper is guilty of stealing my copyrighted title. I'm the only editor of the Gazette."

He explained that the title had been drawn up in good faith, a sea captain having declared that the original issue of the Longshoreman's Gazette had been by a man named Jones who "was at the bottom of the ocean."

"Oh, yeah?" countered Davy, a little mollified, and added:

"Get back to the galley where you belong I'm going to hire a couple of sea lawyers and take the case to Father Neptune."

Temperamental Davy Jones relented a bit and promised us some choice bones of an "old salt horse" which he had found and awoke with a start. Only a dream, but how realistic it seemed!

Greetings, Mr. French

Harbor people are delighted at the appointment of E. S. French as president of the Boston & Maine railroad. He thoroughly understands the needs of the port, through his connection as president of the Mystic Terminal. He was active in establishing new coal diggers at the Mystic yard, greatly facilitating discharge of cargoes. He installed a China clay "sucker," which speeded up handling of the sticky substance. Formerly the old fashioned hand shovel method had delayed clearance.

Fall on Him, Pat

The navy yard wishes to subscribe to the Gazette. We hear bosses are reading about Pat Coyne's wrestling challenge to the entire navy yard crew. Today one modest chap by name of Andrew F. Mackie, chief yeoman of the C. G. telephoned Pat at the customs tower.

"I'm champion of the Gloucester district, began Andy.

"Oh, yeah" yawned the 247-pound medal of honor guardsman. He accepted the challenge.

Hobbies and How

We've assigned the cub reporter of the Gazette to write a series of articles about hobbies of harbor people. First one to come to light is that of Charles F. Gilman, deputy collector of customs, in charge of warehouses. Charles, who was a noted Harvard center, now exercises with duplicate whist. He is a nationally known expert and has participated in many tournaments.

From Army to C. G.

We made a distressing social error today, failing to know the names of three men enlisting in the coast guard, we noted Frank J. Ryan of Dorchester, an ex-army man, had signed up.

"Oh" we thoughtlessly chattered, "the army loses a man to the navy."

In a horrified tone, the recruit informed us he claimed that the navy and coast guard "are not a bit alike.

"The navy and coast guard will both agree on that.

Re-awakening of Boating

The editor of the Gazette sent his star reporter on a survey of motor boats and yachting in the harbor. We learned that there is a distinct boom in this business in Boston, as evidenced by the opening of a couple of big motor boat showrooms downtown. The reason is that nowadays there is less thrill in automobiling on crowded highways. The motorboat and yacht are again coming into their own. We learned that the sales of boats last year was one of the largest here in recent years, and good news is looming also for 1930.

At the Radio Day

By THE RADIO EDITOR

NORMAN BROKENSHIRE, calls himself the world's happiest announcer, or is it the world's sappiest announcer. . . . Well, anyway, he enjoyed himself immensely last night sailing over unfamiliar lands on a magic Statler Hotel bath rug. Once he lost his pal, Charley, and there were three rousing cheers from the band when that fact became known. Towards the end, the genial and nonsensical announcer received a telegram from his wife, saying, "Bring back that bath mat. Tomorrow is Saturday." Maybe all this is utter foolishness, but it gets my vote.

It's now up trying to make the Mystic Knights of the sea a profitable brotherhood while the officers affect trick pockets in their pants. Henceforth, collection of dues will be made in the lodge hall. Cash will be deposited in a box. The box will be nailed to the table. "And you'd better nail the table to the floor," a voice piped. You never know, a little thing like a table ain't nothin for them fellers to get away with."

"Yes, and the table ain't goin' to be put on a trap door, neither," amended the Kingfish.

FROM FRISCO comes the Del Monte program on the N. B. C. Red Network at 8:30. Polly Walker is the star in this special packing of pep and sweet sound sweetmeats. The young I. a. C. who used to romp in the silent drama, as a child actor, is now a prima donna, as the word goes out on the stage. In the open spaces of the sound stages, she is being featured in a radio adaptation of "Hit the Deck," in which she has been seen and heard on the theater screen and exponential horn a few weeks back. Chorus and orchestra will be led

CHAPTER II

ANNE MURDOCK left her office and went back to the copying department to see a friend.

"First chance I've had to get away. I've been so busy since ... place. But tonight ... Betty, how is Joe?"

Betty Howard, a ... looking woman in her early ... smiled, but her ... remained troubled.

"It's pneumonia, Anne. The doctor sent in a nurse. His temperature was pretty high when I phoned last."

Personality

She Has Plenty for Office and Home

"Oh, poor little man." Anne's eyes were heavy with pity. "But don't worry so, try not to. Young ... have to go through these things. Mother said last night that Jim, Kathleen and I all had measles at once, and Kathleen went into bronchial pneumonia—she was only a baby, younger than your Billy, and she came through fine."

"I know. But it's so hard." Mrs. Howard said. "I have to do my work, and my mind isn't on it. A woman's a fool to marry," she added suddenly—"a woman with her living to make."

Anne nodded. She made no pretense at disagreement. She knew Betty Howard's ... a common place story—the clever girl of more than average talent working her way through college, finally getting a good position and dreaming of reaching the heights of her chosen profession. Then after five years' marriage to a man much older than herself, a man struggling to come through the physical and spiritual disaster which his war service had brought him.

Betty had come to the Eaton agency shortly before her marriage. She had carried on successfully, dividing her personality with but little effort, it seemed, between the office and her home. Then had come a ... period of absence from her desk before and after the birth of her boy.

Anne thought, observing Betty's haggard face:

She was in love with him still is. That's what happens to you when you marry a man on the make earning a little more than yourself."

Likes Her Job

Anne Will Not Be Hasty

Her chin went up as if in conscious defiance to an unspoken challenge, and her eyes, of the rare dark blue which deepens to black under emotion, were black now and her ardent mouth straightened to a firm red line.

Betty murmured:

Mrs. Holmes—that's the nurse—was to telephone if—"

"You'll be home pretty soon."

A young man, tall, built like a greyhound, but with frankly red hair and merry eyes, passed by, a sheaf of papers in his hand. Seeing Anne, he paused and smiled gayly, yet with a sort of hungry appeal.

"Remember—8 o'clock!" he reminded her and went on his way, whistling softly.

"You see a good deal of Ted

Luxury of Chief's Office Is Delightful to Anne

O'Hara, don't you?" asked Betty, with the pardonable curiosity of a good friend.

Considerably. We go out, or he comes to the house Mother's crazy about him."

Anne laughed and her small pointed face with its livid coloring lighted up with sheer mischief

Her people and his hailed from the same county back on the old country. They have a grand time together I think they get along he cause they're red headed and neither can put anything over on the other

"You're not far from red headed yourself. Well, he's a nice boy," commented Betty, "and he'll go far in his job" "That's what mother says," Anne told her and stopped and bit her full lower lip. Over the satin texture of her skin the bright color flooded.

Betty, her own disaster uppermost in her mind, she warned, almost involuntarily "Don't . don't be hasty, Anne"

Not me! I like my job so well. I'm too ambitious—too darned ambitious, I guess" she said ruefully, with her lovable trick of catching her self up. "I must get back The chief's with Mr. Sanders. He asked me to take a letter later. Andrews has gone home."

"What's wrong?" Betty wanted to know. "I saw her —she came into the lavatory to wash her face and looked all shot

Anne shook her bright head, ruddy gold in the sun, pale gold in the shadow.

"I don't know. I see her sometimes, you know. I occasionally eat dinner with her. She lives alone on West 10th st. She's an odd woman. And she eats, sleeps and breathes the office."

"Well, I'll get back now." When she had gone, with her heart-warming smile, Mrs. Hoo ard returned to her work. She had liked the younger girl since their first meeting. Anne was so pretty so vital, so friendly, and so excellent brain fune tioned under her clipped lovely hair.

She had worked up well thoroughly not to wish. Her present on was a good one Forty a week, fairly estimated Forty dollars a week for a girl with no responsibilities was an excellent salary.

Mrs. Howard glanced at her watch. She knew was good news Tee O'Hara passed her desk on to Sanders' office. Probably to get another glimpse of Anne He'd been fathoms deep in love with her since they met, but he'd not even on her. No one could blame him missed Mrs. Howard but a girl was a blind and gallant fool to marry.

Was Miss Andrews discharged from the employ of the man she so greatly admired and watched over so ceaselessly? And, if so, what effect did this have on Anne Murdock's ambitions? Read Monday's installment of this intense story of business and love. The interest is quick-moving

Heart Pounded

Anne Was Glad to Work With the Chief

She went back into Andrews' office and straightened the letter paper and carbons mechanically. God! Her heart was pounding To work with the chief, after three years of hoping and planning for such an opportunity! To work with him through the quiet evening hours the office hum silent, the lamplight shining on the big desk, shut in with beauty beauty reflected from panele d walls, beauty in drawn draperies and opening roses

To work—with the chief!

Well, why shouldn't she — permanently? Since her coming into his business she had planned every step to reach this particular goa Had cultivated the uninspiring friendship of Janet Andrews Had learned things secretarial requirement and his personal needs as well It was on the cards that An drews would go some day and Anne had prepared herself to fill that hypothetical vacant place If her chance came to her, why shouldn't she take it? She was younger than Andrews; she was well equipped; she was infinitely better-looking

People said that appearance personality didn't count But she knew better and she knew no one about it with heroes Larry Eaton was a man, as other men. And a woman in business had need of more weapons she could employ to hold her job, and the man who controlled the job Well, if she got that job, though Anne, she'd hold it!

Lacked Charm

But Andrews Had Been a Good Worker

With an impatient sigh she turned back to her desk But her pe ace was not to be won

If Andrews were let out, thought Betty, fleet nails would that mean that Anne might be a logical candidate for the position"

Ann was with Eaton now in his office She waited while he attended to a message that had been brought in and spoke about the room with an appreciation which pe ased Eaton In the last six months she had come at most daily to Miss Andrews' office, bringing memoranda from Sanders to Eaton, and Eaton had looked longingly through the door between

Now she could study the room It had such beauty, she thought She enjoyed spending time here and never see enough of it. She loved beauty intuitively and wistfully and it had not much entered her life

Now, touching her life more closely, had come these glimpses into Eaton's quiet office with its suggestion of money spent for loveliness

Eaton spoke to her in that dangerously magnetic voice, handing her Miss Andrews' notes

"Do you think you can read these, Miss Murdock?" he asked. "Or shall I start over again?"

Anne looked at the pothooks with accustomed eyes

"Yes, I think I can manage, Mr. Eaton. Will you take up your dictation where you left off"

Eaton flashed her an appreciative smile It was rather rare to find a girl who could read another secretary's notes so easily! And thought too, that it was even rarer and amazingly pleasant—to be working with so pretty and young a person

Miss Janet Andrews had been a good worker, but she'd certainly lacked charm Somehow the whole room seemed to need a touch of the womanly and suitable background for the small girl with the red-gold hair and the pointed ardent face whose crossed eyes and short skirts revealed delightful limbs Mr Eaton was absurdly conscious that he was taking especial pains with his dictation

"Thank you," he said, as she rose to go. "Can you get it out at once for me" Special delivery. You might if Mr. Sanders doesn't need you immediately, use Miss Andrews' office."

A moment later Anne had settled at Janet's orderly desk The small pleasant boudoir room had about it a certain air of prestige Andrews' name was on the outer door in discreet gilt letters Secretary to the President

A little later Anne laid the letter on Eaton's desk He read it through commendingly, for her speed and accuracy signed and, as she turned to go, asked on a sudden impluse

"Shall you be busy this evening, Miss Murdock?"

She thought of her engagement with O'Hara, answered immediately,

"No, Mr. Eaton."

"Miss Andrews' illness leaves me in rather a hole," he confided ruefully; "I'll arrange things with Mr. Sanders if you can stay and help me for an hour or two."

He looked up at her suddenly Her face did not change as he asked his question but her breast rose perceptibly with an increased pace in her breathing

"I'd be glad to, Mr. Eaton," she replied quietly

Ideas From Paris By Elaine

Good to Eat

FOR many years eggs and bacon have been the national breakfast dish, but there are other uses for bacon besides that of a breakfast meal. Also the use of eggs for the main dish need not be limited to breakfast alone

Martha Lee

Bacon as a garnish is considered indispensable by the French chef and many home makers Lean meat such as round steak, tenderloin and rump, also the flavor of cuts of veal, are greatly improved by the addition of bacon in the cooking Strips of bacon placed over these meats give the necessary richness and desired flavor

Bland foods such as macaroni spaghetti, rice and cereals may be made into very attractive luncheon and dinner dishes by the addition of a few slices of flavorful bacon Vegetables such as fresh green peas, tomatoes, and lima beans are greatly improved by the added richness furnished when crisp bacon cubes or bacon fat is added to the dish

For the Sunday night supper there are few dishes more acceptable than crisp bacon sandwiches with a slice or two of tomato and a dab of salad dressing

Another very welcome dish is German potato salad, prepared by frying until crisp 1 cup of bacon cubes drain and add to the drained bacon fat 3 tbsps vinegar [illegible] Remove from fat thoroughly Heat 1 cup medium sized potatoes, boiled, drained and sliced while hot. Add 2 minced onions and the crisp bacon. Mix lightly with a wooden fork and serve while hot. This bacon dressing is also very nice to be served with wilted lettuce

For the luncheon suggestion bacon omelet, scrambled eggs and bacon broiled bacon and tomatoes and tomato egg toast lead the list Other uses for bacon are bacon muffins — adding crisp lettuce bacon to a plain muffin batter bacon and spinach—adding crisp bacon diced to cooked and drained spinach creamed bacon—prepared by frying out the bacon adding flour to the bacon drippings 1 tbsp to each tbsp of fat and sufficient milk to make a medium thick cream sauce Serve on toast pouring the sauce over the [illegible] of bacon

For the impromptu supper, baked eggs with bacon are especially nice

BAKED EGGS

INGREDIENTS

6 eggs
1 tbsp flour
1 tbsp. minced onion
½ tsp. paprika
Buttered crumbs
1 cup stock or milk
1 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup chopped bacon, fried until crisp

METHOD

Blend the flour together in a saucepan boiler and then add the hot milk, gradually, stirring until smooth and thick then add the seasoning Place half of this in a well greased baking dish the bottom of which has been covered with a few buttered crumbs Break in over the eggs being careful not to break the yolks Add the chopped bacon to the remainder of the sauce, and place over the eggs Cover with a few buttered crumbs on top [illegible] Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. for [illegible] minutes or until the eggs are set Serve on toast

In this form of [illegible] the [illegible] are served in custard cups, placing one egg in each ramekin dividing the other ingredients in equal portions and proceeding as if baking in a single dish. These may be served with tomato sauce

Don't Marry Without Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My eldest daughter is seventeen. She works downtown, but loves books and goes to college in the evening It is so hard for us to support the other five children that we think she should marry the well-to-do man who admires her, and in this way help our poor parents. She is very obstinate

Cambridge. MRS E. R. L.

SYMPATHIZE deeply with your struggle to take care of your family. But I must warn you that you are asking of your daughter too great a sacrifice. To marry without love, at seventeen, in order to provide money for her parents might blight the poor girl's entire life. Spare her, I implore you! Perhaps she ought to give up college, although I take it that this costs you nothing But isn't this education of hers, after all, a preliminary investment and aren't you sure that in a few years she will generously share with you the actual dividends that are sure to yield?

Bill Kennedy to Run in Marathon

Tappen Post of N. Y. Enters 7 Plodders

TAPPEN Post, American Legion, of New York has served notice that it will be very much in the race for the team prize in the annual B. A. A. Marathon next Saturday by entering seven experienced plodders.

Twelve other entries have also been received by Al Hart, chairman of the Unicorn race committee, which brings the field up to 120.

One of these came from Bill Kennedy of the Signet A. C. of Port Chester, N. Y. He is the famous bricklayer who won the event several years ago, finished among the leaders several times and ran 22nd last year.

Another was from Gabriel Rustelainen of the North Branch Y. M. C. A., Montreal, who finished seventh a year ago though few probably recall it because of the youth's name.

The Tappen Post runners are Al Lee, Walter Hines, Arthur Lidley, Mike Dwyer, Charles Sertic, Norman Korn and Edwin White.

Others to enter are William Cochrane, Windsor, Nova Scotia; Nick Schultz, Oakdale, Conn.; William Toland, Medford; Frank Guarino, Brooklyn; John V. McCarron, Somerville; Harold Fields, Alexandria, Va.; Joe McHugh, Pittsburg; Carl Hoth, Glenwood; Louis Young, Cambridge and Pat Flood, South Boston.

Flood is the third South Boston entry which indicates that the Peninsular district, long famous as a developer of athletes, is now interested in marathon running.

Simpson Out for New Sprint Mark

Philadelphia, April 12—Ohio State will have relay teams and individuals competing in fourteen events of the annual University of Pennsylvania Relay Carnival on April 25 and 26, according to H. J. Swartz, manager of the meet.

Ohio State entries include relay teams in the quarter and half mile sprint events, both of which were won by Ohio last year.

Simpson, who last year hung up a world's record of 9 2-5 for the 100-yard dash with starting blocks, will attempt to repeat his triumph of last year and the year before.

CARNERA DRAWS $358,500 IN 14 FIGHTS

Americans are the most curious folks on earth. Fourteen cities in this country have paid a total of $358,500 to see Primo Carnera, biggest fighting man of a century, knock out thirteen opponents in one or two rounds each. One fight went six.

Primo's handlers estimate that 40,000 people have been turned away from arenas where he has fought to date. He broke all records at $3 tops in almost every city Carnera drew $17,000 to box Jack Cloisby Tuesday night at San Francisco, his last fight.

The giant's gate record follows: New York, $64,000; Chicago, $56,000; Newark, $49,000; St. Louis, $31,0000; Memphis, $9000; Oklahoma City, $8000; New Orleans, $14,000; Philadelphia, $33,000; Minneapolis, $13,000; St. Louis, $51,000; Jacksonville, $8500; Kansas City, $17,000; Denver, $14,000; San Francisco, $17,000.

Read Primo's Size—Then Hide Yourself

"DEES-A BEEG FELLER" CARNERA is so tremendous that to appreciate his real size all the ordinary man has to do is to read these measurements—compare them with one's own puny self—and then go hide somewhere.

The mammoth fighter's right arm—for a starter—measures 25 inches from the shoulder-pit to the finger-tips and 31 inches to his great fist. Other measurements on the right arm are:

Hand (open), 12½ inches around.
Wrist, 10 inches.
Forearm, 15½ inches, relaxed.
Forearm, 16½ inches, taut.
Elbow span, 13½ inches, relaxed.
Elbow span, 14½ inches, taut.
Bicep, 15 inches, relaxed.
Bicep, 16½ inches, taut.
Shoulder, 21½ inches at pit.

When Carnera stretches out his fingers—as does a piano player in reaching for an octave—the tape measurer gauges at 11½ inches from the thumb tip to the end of the little finger.

The fist, itself, takes 15½ inches of a tape measure to reach around it. And that deadly weapon measures 7 inches in height from bottom to the top of the thumb—seven inches of advancing power when Carnera so wills—and he always does.

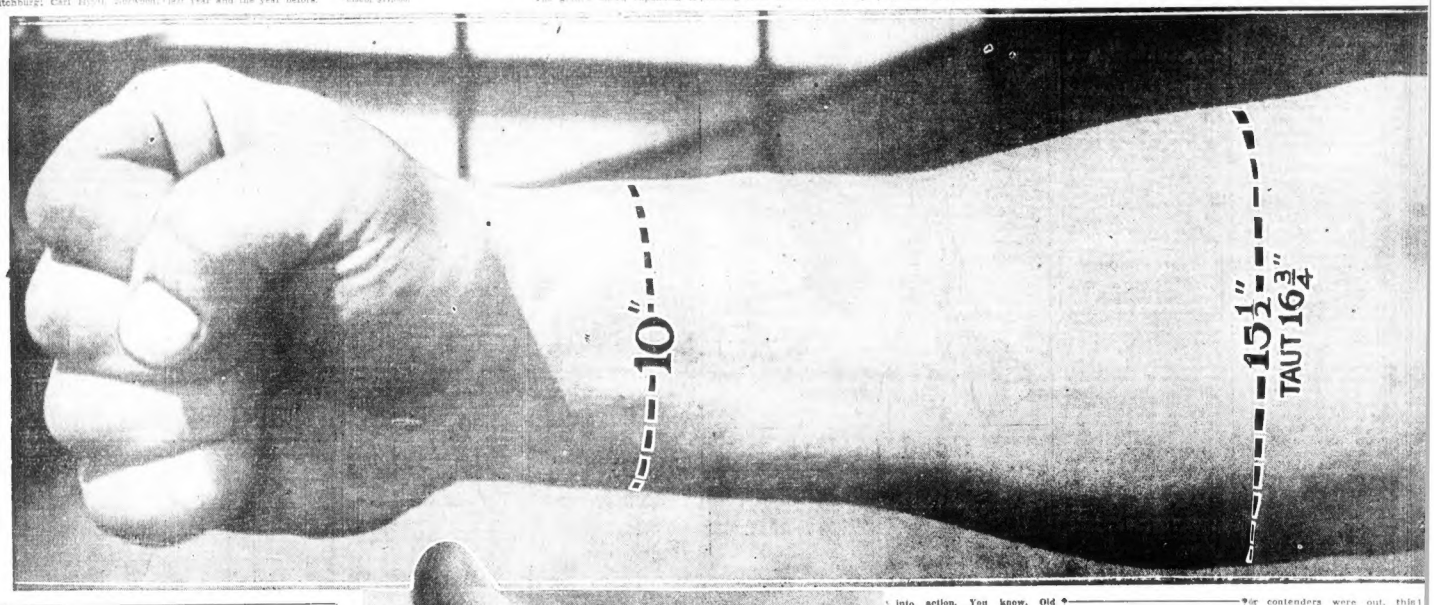
The giant's chest, expanded, is 60 inches greater than the girth of his waist. The waist line measures 38 inches and the chest, inflated, records at 58 inches—deflated, 44 inches, making a 10-inch chest expansion.

Breadon Hot After Grimes' Contract

St. Louis, April 12 (INS)—St Louis Cardinal followers today were excitedly discussing just two topics of conversation. These were the arrival of the Red Birds and the announcement of Sam Breadon, Cardinal president, that he was angling for Burleigh Grimes, the pitcher traded by Pittsburgh to Boston.

Ponies Contract Flu, Polo Practice Is Off

Influenza among the ponies will prevent Princeton's polo team from holding outdoor practice before returning from the Easter holidays.



THE CRUSHING HAND

Why waste time explaining the dimensions of this great right hand. It belongs to Carnera. Place your own right hand over it and your problem is solved. Yes.

EVENING AM

MR. BOSTON
—by—
JACK CONWAY

Jack Dempsey Likely to Battle Carnera

MR. BOSTON was in a cheerful mood when he breezed into the Sporting Department today. He immediately mounted the office soap box and started broadcasting.

"Old Jawn Dempsey must be getting the itch to get back into action as he reads of Primo Carnera tipping over various mugs in his tour of the fistic arenas," said Mr. Boston. "I would not be surprised to see Old Jawn polishing off his ring armour after the Sharkey-Schmeling bout on June 12 gets out of the way and tipping the world he is going to stage a comeback.

"The first time Old Jawn got a peek at a picture showing Carnera's huge body and tremendous feet he must have had a burning desire to get into a ring with the Italian and let 'Iron Mike' sweep into action. You know, Old Jawn has always liked those big, ponderous fellows who rest their elbows on mountain ranges when they stand erect. I shall always remember how old Jawn when a youngster of some 24 years and weighing only 183 pounds, crushed the gigantic Jess Willard under that boiling sun out in Toledo.

"I do not believe Dempsey was seriously considering staging a comeback until Carnera breezed into the picture.

"Down in Florida a year ago last Winter Old Jawn told me he lion in regard to a comeback if fellows like Sharkey and Tunney. He felt they moved around too fast for him. He then confided to me he might change his opinlon in regard to a come back if some big, slow guy who would be easy to hit busted his way out front in the fistic parade. He mentioned the names of Risko, Heeney and Stribling. None of these men has clicked, but I think Old Jawn now has his man in Carnera.

Carnera Can Take A Healthy Wallop

"DONT tab this Carnera fellow as a dub merely because he has been going around tapping a flock of suckers on the chin for one and two-round knockouts. I have it from Norman Hurst and other eminent foreign writers and experts who have seen Carnera in action in Europe that the big Italian is a pretty fair heavyweight.

"They tell me that Primo can come back smiling after being hit on the chin with a mighty wallop. I have always considered this the real test of a heavyweight. Any big man can punch, but it is the fellow who can take a sock who gets to the top."

Primo Now Popular With European Fans

GEORGE R. CANTY, U. S. trade commissioner to Europe, has written Mr. Boston in regard to the new popularity of the latest heavyweight sensation.

"The papers in Europe are full of Carnera," writes Mr. Canty. "They are beginning to think he is the goods. While in Rome recently I stepped into a cafe for a cup of coffee and saw a special bulletin on a chalk board that Carnera had stopped Montgomery. This is the essence of popularity, as everybody visits these cafes. Carnera can now come home as a hero, whereas a few months ago none in Italy would give him a second glance."

Chicago Will Get Dempsey-Carnera Go

MR. BOSTON resumed his consideration of the proposed Dempsey-Carnera mill:

"I look for Dempsey and Carnera to mingle in a 10-round mill in Chicago in September," declared the veteran. "Jack Dempsey will also occupy the role of promoter, which will enable him to win back the 60 grand he dropped staging boxing at the Chicago Coliseum during the indoor season. He will pick up $300,000 or so as additional profits.

"Old Jawn will also receive $200,000 or so as his cut for letting 'Iron Mike' fly. Carnera's end will run close to $500,000, which is a lot of money for anybody.

"Carnera's tour is a perfect build-up for the fight. No matter what is said about the ability of some of the birds Primo has chilled, the fact remains he is piling up a knockout record and keeping in the news.

"The public is beginning to tire of seeing Carnera knocking out fourth raters and will storm the arena when he opposes Old Jawn, as they will figure the former champion will chill the huge Italian, as most of the

High School Student Dies in Ring

Grimes Trade Will Cost Buccs Pennant

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, April 12—Twenty-four hours of reflection have brought baseball no nearer a solution of the baffling mystery, known as the Grimes case, whereas the matter is really very commonplace and can be solved by deductive reasoning in 10 simple applications.

As I see it, everybody has missed the fundamental point of the situation, which is that the Grimes deal came under the head of strategy. The Pittsburgh Club has saved between $2,000 and $4,000 and all it has lost is the pennant.

There isn't a handbook in town today that won't be willing to shade its price on the Pirates against the National League field. Their price had been about 4 to 1 but, unless something further develops from the deal, these odds are liable to lengthen out like a telephone conversation between two blonds.

It doesn't take the mentality of a gymnast to figure the difference between the twenty gamba that Grimes probably would have won in Pittsburgh and the seven or eight that Percy Lee Jones is liable to win, provided he stakes himself to a magnificent season.

Dreyfuss Wanted Brandt Instead of Lee Jones

AS for further developments from the transaction, there is likely to be none, it was indicated by an inquiry today in certain quarters. This also uncovered the report that the Pirates first tried to get Ed Brandt, another Boston left hander, before agreeing to take Jones.

Also that as much as $50,000 may have figured in the deal; further, that Barney Dreyfuss had made up his mind to get rid of Grimes more than a week ago and had spent the interval in making the best trade available.

Deals with the Cubs, Giants and for contenders were out, thing the kind of business that hey doesn't do. So he took the 000—and bought shirt studs for coatjacket.

Of course, Mr. Grimes' days in tsburgh became minutes as soon Barney was apprised of the fact t the man wanted a salary of 200 for one year or $20,000 on a year basis. Not that he is to the waistcoat you understand; he simply makes it a point er to give anybody $20,000, ars. Some men are that way.

Grimes Refused to Sign for $18,000

ACCORDING to the general understanding the Pittsburgh s went as far as $18,000 for one r with Grimes and then called it time off. It would think nothing of spending $10,000 for some empty-dumpty who later would n out to be a big help to Jersey ty.

For a thousand, here or there, for pitcher who had won almost 40 mes in two seasons and wanted give it 20 more this year was too ac for a ball club to tolerate. If is smart she would ought to idy up to get dumb.

As a matter of fact, baseball has ade a point of being unsmart very time it decides to move bimes around. The Pirates traded m years ago for Stengel, Cutshaw ed cash.

The old thing left is the rush. hen, when Brooklyn decided to et something for him, it thought he matter over very thoroughly and finally took Butch Jealine.

Later, McGraw engineered that masterly trade of Grimes for Vic ldridge, and now Dreyfuss sends im away for a pitcher who is not he man he used to be and prolonby never was.

Murphy to Captain Conn. Aggies Eleven

Charles Murphy of Putnam, halfback, was recently elected to captain the Connecticut Aggies' football team for next season. Murphy has played on the varsity for two years.

Daniel Chubbuck of Mechanicsville, center and high scorer last season, was chosen to head the basketball outfit.

ERICAN SPORTS

Might Is Right—Carnera's Righ

THIS tremendous fist and arm is the property of Primo Carnera, Italy's heavyweight boxing sensation. It appears before you in actual size. The tape measure has told the story. Thirty-one inches from his fist to shoulder. Add four inches to that when his hand is open. Result, 35 inches from his finger tips to his shoulder. A robot? Maybe so, but he has proved himself a capable ringster among the second and third-raters and may go on to upset every prognostication regarding his future. That monstrous right fist and arm may lead him to the world's heavyweight championship.

SWEETSER'S LOSS IS BLOW TO U. S. GOLF HOPES

NEW YORK, April 12—Who will be the eighth man on the Walker cup team when the international golfers sail down the Mersey on the Mauretania on April 30?

The untimely loss of Jess Sweetser to Uncle Sam's forces, particularly at this late date, may prove really serious so far as our side is concerned, if neither Maurice McCarthy nor Roland Mackenzie, the official alternates, can be prevailed upon to fill the boots of the former national champion.

Or rather, if Maurice McCarthy refuses to accept the nomination, for surely young Mackenzie's golf today doesn't warrant his inclusion on an international team.

It is generally admitted that the Britons have a better chance to win at Sandwich this May than ever before, for various reasons. The first is that John Bull, despite his class-distinction method of electing a team, has a strong lineup for 1930.

THEN again, Sandwich, as Walter Hagen will attest, is a real he-golfers' course, so much so that Bobby Jones strenuously objected to staging the international match there. But America, with a championship team clipping pars and birdies, stood more than an even chance of retaining the Walker cup for the sixth consecutive time.

Now, however, the sky doesn't look so blue. No one golfer can be said to win or lose a team match for his side, as each of the players is in the battle as a definite unit working toward a winning goal. Yet a shot-maker such as Sweetser, who is at his best at match play, unquestionably has a physiological effect on his teammates.

JESS must have struggled with the temptation to go over with the boys again, yet his last experience abroad was a costly, painful one and possibly he decided that his family responsibility came first. He has played in all five international battles, winning six out of 10 possible points for the United States.

To go abroad will mean the loss of from six weeks to two months from business, and as Jess said, he has a wife and two youngsters to consider.

The honor of being included on the team is all well and good, but the bills mount up just the same. It's a problem that several of the boys have to contend with.

MAURICE McCARTHY'S college days will end in June and at Georgetown University you can't graduate because you're a great athlete, you must have the marks. At least, that was the metropolitan champion's answer when his friends commiserated with him when the official Walker cup lineup was announced.

And it wasn't sour grapes, for the Brooklyn boy has already told the U. S. G. A. that he can't get away in case the officials finally decide they need him. Roland Mackenzie has also practically declined the honor as he has taken a new job to Wilmington.

Who's going to be the eighth man on the Walker cup team?

That's one for the U. S. G. A. to answer!

Lermond Is Due in Hub Next Week

Leo Lermond is expected in Boston early next week from an extended winter tour of Australia. Jack Ryder, his coach and trainer, has received word that Lermond has arrived in Seattle and is now on his way across the continent to the Hub.

Lermond did quite a bit of racing in Australia but Boston followers of this great distance runner got very little information concerning the results of his performances. Leo should have quite a bit of interesting news.

Jack Ryder expects that Lermond will be at the Boston College track within a short while to start conditioning for a series of spring meets and the National A. A. U. championships.

Ursinus Appoints New Sports Manager

Russell "Jing" Johnson of Parkerford, Pa., one-time Ursinus and Philadelphia Athletics' pitcher, has been appointed graduate manager of athletics at Ursinus College. He succeeds W. W. Bancroft.

Johnson, after graduating in 1916, hurled for the A's for a number of years. He coached the Lehigh baseball nine for a while and last spring returned to the diamond with the Allentown Dukes but quit when troubled with a weak heart.

WHIRLWIND AND YANKEE TO STAGE RACE

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Even before the boats are launched, prospects are shaping up well for a series of two or three races off Marblehead between two of the America Cup defenders.

The ships to race will be the Yankee and the Whirlwind, both of which have been under construction for months.

Late May or early June have been set as the tentative times for the still tentative races—and the dates of the races, if successfully arranged, will be regulated by the speed with which the two craft are readied up.

The race committee of the Eastern Yacht Club has agreed to manage the series off Marblehead and a cup has been put up as a trophy.

If the proposition goes through these will be the first races of a Boston cup boat in Massachusetts Bay in 43 years, the last having been sailed August 11, 1887, when the iron sloop Volunteer, owned by Gen. Charles J. Paine, father of Frank G. Paine, designer and one of the owners of the Yankee, licked the Puritan, Atlantic, Priscilla and Mayflower.

Bobby Smith in Shape to Toss Braves Opener

By BILL CONNELL

BOBBY SMITH, veteran righthander of the Braves pitching staff, will draw the assignment to toss in the opening game of the regular season with the Giants at the Polo Grounds next Tuesday.

The former infielder who was shifted to the mound squad several years ago, is in the best condition of his career as a pitcher and hopes to have his best season.

Smith was one of the few members of the Tribe who did not catch cold at St. Pete this year and so he has not been slowed up in his practice workouts. His arm is as strong as ever and his control is good.

The entire squad of warriors is in unusually good condition. The weather at St. Pete this spring was colder than in many years and the lack of warm sunshine brought many complaints from the athletes.

Bill Connell

That poor weather was really good for the Braves. For several years, ever since going to St. Petersburg to train, the team has come along toward the peak of physical condition too rapidly.

When the season started, that meant the players were down first and while they could go well for the early weeks of the season, the men wilted and went stale along about June, when the going was hardest.

This year the Braves suffered quite a bit from colds and other ailments. They did not improve in physical shape as they should and that condition worried Manager McKechnie.

Braves in Proper Physical Trim to Start

Since leaving Florida the Braves have developed steadily and now are in just the right physical shape to start the season, and carry on right through the hot months in that any letdown.

The Tribe struck a little cold weather en route to Boston from Florida and that too, helped to harden the men to changes in temperature. So when the Braves come back to the Tepee for their Boston league opening, April 22, a few chill days won't hurt them.

Socks Seibold is the alternate for the opening day mound job. Seibold, one of the smartest and steadiest pitchers with the Boston National League club, has loased great ball in the South. He should be one of the mainstays of the Braves' hill staff this season.

Ben Cantwell, slender right handed pitcher of the Tribe, had a sore arm which did not loosen up until a few days back. The wing is all right now, Cantwell says, and he will do his bit in the league frays.

The three rookie pitchers of the Braves, Bobby Brown, Tracy Hart and Al Smith, can help out a lot in relief work. Brown and Smith are right handers, and Hart is a southpaw. The Tribe is fortunate in picking up such a promising trio of pitchers at the same time.

And the youngsters are lucky in coming to the Braves this spring. The mound staff of the Tribe includes seven pitchers who were with the team last season. This is not a big force, so the rookies have a good chance to stay up instead of being sent to the minors for seasoning.

RING TOURNEY MAKES HIT

Judging by the way telegrams, telephone calls and letters have been pouring in to Alex MacLean, matchmaker at the Garden, from boxers and boxing managers throughout New England, the N. E. professional boxing tournament at the Garden is certain to be a huge success.

From all appearances, it seems as if the sport of boxing will be back stronger than ever before the tournament is ended, for boxers from every state in New England will be given an opportunity of showing their wares.

The tournament will be handled by Alex MacLean, who directed the A. E. F. championship tourney in Europe after the World War.

There will be a number of new boys who never before appeared in Boston, and they may prove their ability in just as striking a manner as Gene Tunney did in the A. E. F. tourney.

Before that tourney, Tunney was known to only a few in the fight business. He went through the four, six and eight-rounders, and finally won the light-heavyweight championship, later winning the inter-allied championship.

The first of the elimination bouts will be started with flyweights and bantamweights as preliminaries to the main bout at the Garden, April 25. All flyweights and bantamweights wishing to compete in this tournament must file their entry blanks, together with weight and addresses, at the Boston Garden before April 21.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

It is so essential that you base your golf swing on good form principles because of a whole train of golfing faults ensue otherwise—too many of them to mention here. You may assume, on the other hand, that many golfing ills which you may have acquired will fold up and reluctantly ease away, one by one, if you begin patterning your swing on form principles rather than on the theory of making yourself hit hard, regardless. One must be patient, too, the development of a good swing being somewhat like holding securities in the stock market—it takes plenty of patience and the courage to act when everything seems to be against you. One common failing with golfers follows that line exactly. They won't keep to a purpose long enough to attain the objective, often not even long enough to make a fair start toward it. That's why in golf a good beginning is everything—much more, I think, than "half the battle." One thing is certain. The player who determines to depend on form will not become worse, which is something you cannot say for the bird who "muscles" in and sticks to his muscle principle round after round. Certainly at the start of the season the golfer can make no better determination than to start with golfing form and to stick to golfing form, regardless of immediate results. Today is a good day for that.

Old Time Boxer Dies at Age of 60

Dan Daly, old-time boxer, who engaged in one of the longest fights on record, is dead. He was 60 years old.

Many New Players on Local Clubs

THE oldest inhabitant can't remember the time when either the Red Sox or Braves started a season with as many promising new players as each outfit boasts of on the eve of the 1930 campaign.

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Tribe could start a team composed entirely of newcomers with confidence, while Manager Heinie Wagner of the Red Sox could present a lineup including six rookies which would probably prove as strong as any Fenway combination did last season.

The chances of either Hub outfit getting anywhere this season depends on its new material. The fans know this and, consequently, their interest during the early weeks of the race will be centered exclusively on these youngsters.

There are so many rookies on each roster that a brief history of the most promising will be offered so that the cash customers may know a little something about them when they first look 'em over.

Walter Berger Is Best of New Players

The most highly praised of the lot is Walter Berger, who is holding down left field for the Tribe. This 26-year-old fly-chaser was purchased at great expense from the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League, where he was a great fielder and greater hitter.

The jump to the big show doesn't seem to have lessened his ability any. He has been fielding in grand style and slugging the best of pitching all spring.

If any other of the new local players proves better than Berger it will probably be Tom Oliver, Sox center fielder, who was secured by waiver from the Athletics who drafted him from Little Rock.

Oliver, a native of Montgomery, Ala., is 26 years old and almost as heavy and tall as Berger. He's a perfect fielder, a great thrower, fleet of foot and a consistent if not heavy hitter. He bats and throws right-handed.

Bill Sweeney One of the Fastest Men on Sox Team

Each club has a new first baseman. Bill Sweeney of the Red Sox is a former Detroit player who was drafted from Toronto. He's a heavy right-handed hitter and, next to Jack Gallivan, the fastest man on the team.

Johnny Neun, the new Tribal first-sacker, is also a former Tiger and was drafted from Baltimore. He's a left-handed thrower but bats both ways. He's quite a stylist around the initial sacker and a fair hitter.

Each team has a new second baseman, too. Otis Miller of the Sox has played most at third than at second because of Bill Regan's fine work at the keystone sack, but he was drafted from Milwaukee as a second-sacker.

He is a good hitter and capable fielder. Billy Rhiel of the Braves was drafted from the Dodgers. He's rated as a good hitter, but he's not much a fielder, according to reports.

Braves Have Three to Choose From for Third

All the Braves third-basemen are new. Randy Moore, who held down the berth all Spring came up from Dallas, Tex., as an outfielder. He bats left and throws right. He hit 'em in the minors and is hitting 'em in the big show. He doesn't know anything about the third base play, though, so will probably be sent back to the outfield.

The other hot corner guardians are Gene Robertson, formerly of the Yankees and Red Sox, formerly of the Red Sox. Both are known by Hub fans.

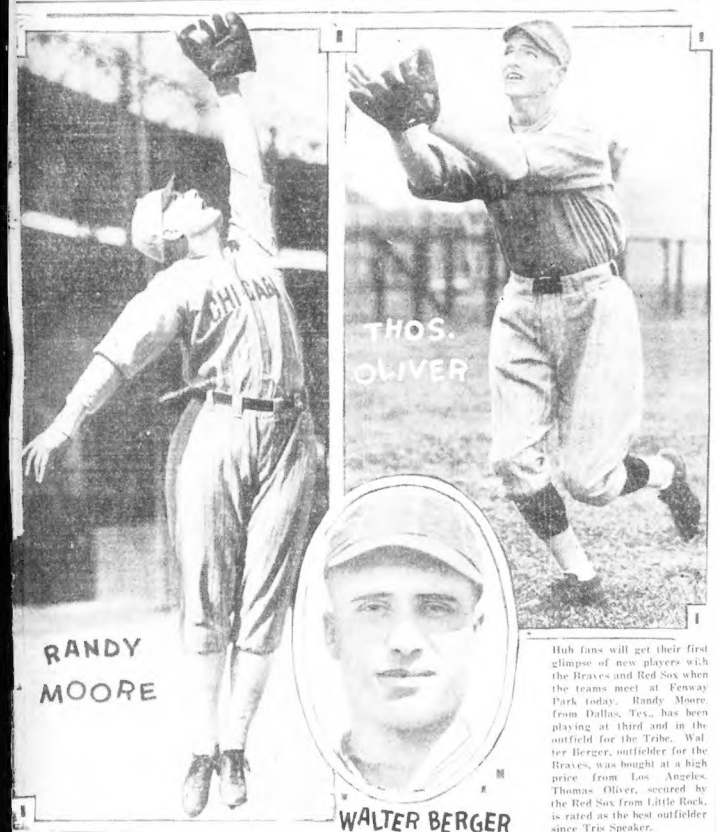
Braves Play Sox at Fenway

NEW PLAYERS WITH HUB TEAMS MAKE DEBUT



Hub fans will get their first glimpse of new players with the Braves and Red Sox when the teams meet at Fenway Park today. Randy Moore, from Dallas, Tex., has been playing at third and in the outfield for the Tribe. Walter Berger, outfielder for the Braves, was bought at a high price from Los Angeles. Thomas Oliver, secured by the Red Sox from Little Rock, is rated as the best outfielder since Tris Speaker.

BRAVES PLAY SOX AT FENWAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Happy days are here again!

Boston's both major baseball clubs, each under new managers and rated more formidable than for several years, open in the 1930 diamond season at 3 P. M. today at Fenway Park.

It's not official, of course, but Today's game and the one slated for tomorrow between the same clubs at Braves Field are merely exhibitions, with enough for one day.

But they will be fought as hard as any championship battle, as each team is anxious to feature the site July thought the assertions of Pres. Bob McKechnie of the Sox that they won't make any special effort to win.

And they will offer a baseball hungry populace an opportunity to cast a bet and bet on, since last fall and to judge for itself whether the glowing reports about the two outfits and their new players, which have been coming up from the South for the past six weeks and more, are true.

Neither team has been quite a favorite for the very good reason.

Both appear considerably stronger than last year, but there seems little to choose between them on paper.

The Sox met with more success in the South but the Braves faced much tougher opposition.

The Warriors fared badly during the past week, while the Fenway troupe enjoyed the cold bear feeds from a victory over the highly touted Brooklyn Dodgers and nothing the American Leaguers have accomplished to date compares with the eight straight victories the Wearers turned in at the expense of the world's champion Athletics in Miami.

Anyway you look at it, the series is an even money proposition.

BETWEEN YOU and ME

By Damon Runyon

NEW YORK, April 11—'Tis only a matter of about five short years back that your faithful operative met Mr. Eddie Kane of Chicago, in the grill room of the Friars' Club in New York, and said to him, said he:

"Mr. Kane, if your Mr. Tom Gibbons will fight Harry Wills under the auspices of the Milk Fund, your Mr. Tom Gibbons can have $150,000 flat, and the man against end of $150,000 at the normal rate of 33⅓ per cent is——"

"How dare you?" demanded Mr. Kane, or words to that effect.

"How dare I what?" your operative asked, innocently.

"Offer me $150,000 for that match," said Mr. Kane.

"Is it too much?" your operative inquired.

"Harry Wills has accepted $100,000 for his end. The match will draw about $500,000."

"I want $250,000 for Gibbons," said Mr. Kane, and your operative reeled out into the night slightly stunned.

I suppose Mr. Jack Dempsey has refused more money in a single job for a fight than any other gladiator that ever lived. I know that Mr. Tom O'Rourke once had backing to peat $500,000 cash for a match between Dempsey and Wills.

But next to Mr. Dempsey I think Mr. Tom Gibbons, per Mr. Kane, turned down more money in one chunk that time in the Friars' grill than was ever refused by a fighter for a non-championship bout.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The golden text is, "He called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick" (Luke 9:1, 2).

THE UNEMPLOYED

The Federal Council of Churches has set aside April 27 as a day for all churches and clergymen to consider in pulpit, prayer and discussion those who are without work.

"We suggest to the churches that special attention be given to the problem of unemployment in the services on April 27."

Largest Church Mural Unveiled

The Rev. T. W. Davison, of the First Church, Charlestown, is here seen showing a few of his parisioners a first glimpse of a mural painting which has been executed by a young Italian artist. This picture, 36 feet by 29 feet, is the result of 18 months' work by Benjamin Langa of the Museum School of Fine Arts. He has named his creation "The Supreme Spiritual Triumph," and represents Christ's resurrection with various symbolic figures suspended on clouds similar to the paintings in the Vatican. The artist says this is the largest church mural in the city.

An unveiling will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the Henry Price Masonic Lodge and an order of the Eastern Star will be special guests. This church descends directly from the first religious society—though unorganized officially—established in 1629. A year later Governor William Bradford moved to Shawmut-Boston, and there founded the First Church, Boston.

Hour of Music at First Church

With the performance tomorrow of "Parsifal" at First church, corner of Berkeley and Marlborough sts., the season of Hours of Choral Music which William E. Zeuch has been conducting Sunday afternoons at that church will come to a close. This great work is a fitting climax to this remarkable series which has proved of such interest to the music lovers of Boston.

The parts to be performed are the Prelude, the Transformation and Grail Scene, Good Friday music, and the Glorification or Finale. These comprise the most important and popular parts of the opera and are the ones that are most frequently played as excerpts at orchestral concerts.

COPLEY METHODIST

"Christ Sanctioning Life's Enthusiasms," is the subject about which Dr. William L. Stidger will preach tomorrow morning. He has just returned from a western trip.

James Earl Shultz Condemns Bigots

Tomorrow evening at the Adventist Temple, East Canton Street, the Rev. Earl Shultz will tell what he knows of a movement in Boston by certain citizens to curb freedom of thought and speech. He declares that he knows by name men who are strong in condemning religious thought which they do not approve of. When asked yesterday to say who these intolerant critics are Mr. Shultz said he would give what information he has at the Temple tomorrow evening, and he hoped many people would be glad to hear what he will have to say.

FORD HALL TO CLOSE

"Is Liberalism a Menace?" is the subject to be debated at Ford Hall at its last meeting of the season. The speakers will be Arthur Garfield Hayes, and Victor F. Calverton.

Whose Pastor?

This is the profile of a leading Lutheran minister of Greater Boston and of New England.

Any reader who will send in this picture with the right name and with a two-cent stamp will receive back an artistic enlargement of the silhouette.

Letters From Readers

Something to Think About

Editor Boston American:

On behalf of some wives like myself, I couldn't resist answering A Widower's letter printed in the evening edition of the American of April 8. For myself I must say that I never spent as much money as my husband uselessly or otherwise. I think if I had $15 to spend on a hat or anything else I'd be in my seventh heaven. I only bought one dress (for best) in five years and then only paid $10 for it, even feeling elated at the time. I have been married nine years and have had most of my clothes given me, never even buying a coat and allowing a year for a pair of shoes, paying not more than $5 for same.

I know there are a good many wives as economical as I, but Widower probably has not had the privilege of meeting them, I am sorry to say, so lets hear from some more women on their personal expenditures.

Trusting you will print my answer to Widower, I will take a graceful departure, and sign myself,

ECONOMICALLY INCLINED.

Praises Mulhern for Starting Garrett Probe

Editor Boston American:

Your activity in throwing the search light of your column on this present scandal and offering real money ($1000) to the public of Massachusetts for the evidence to convict these hirelings of corruption in the Boston police department, deserves the utmost commendation.

I am not a champion of the wets or the drys, of Republicans or Democrats, or of especial news sheet edited in Boston, as I look them all over and there are good and bad qualities in all of them according to the perusser's point of view, but I cannot help but state that your paper is positively the only Boston sheet that the thinker is interested in.

There is something bigger than a mere police force, a mere political party, or a mere set or dire tendency and that big thing is this—how can government founded on all men being free and equal, survive if these corrupt practices are hidden by the authorities we put there to supervise the honest carrying on of constituted authority, which is about the only thing we have to differentiate our generation from the generations in the old days so far as the human emotions are concerned.

Truth and light have been the greatest factors in the progress of civilization, so keep the home fires burning in that column of yours and, though it is two-fisted rent named Mulhern a boost (no, I don't know him and couldn't vote for him), but to my mind nobody should steal the picture from him. He fought for this investigation when the world was against him.

One Way to Cure Habits of the Bad

Editor Boston American:

In glancing over reports for the annual deportations of aliens, I find that 2,908 of them were deported in 1929. Then, in going deeper into causes of this action, I find the charges against them are: Larceny, robbery, perjury, forgery, assault and battery, murder, manslaughter, selling narcotics, rape, immorality, etc.

It is about time that we practiced deportation upon natives for these same crimes and irregularities who are repeaters. This is the only way to curb their habits. Study them to some ideal. Some of those Byrd discovered might fill the bill. These humans will improve if taken away from civilization, and this is the only way that they will.

Sees "Robin Hood" Side of Gangsters

Editor Boston American:

As one wanders around Boston he is bound to drop into some place and hear something different than the ordinary. At one of the noon services in a Boston church, I heard a speaker said something about Chicago gangsters, called "Go-Getters." He did not handle them.

He thought they were resenting the drabness of life. They do not want to be dull—they need excitement. While these lean towards the shady side of life, they cannot be wholly judged by it. When you hear of their going to the poor and feeding the hungry and in their own way brightening another's life with kindness and good will, you are inclined to pull the curtain of criticism half-way down on them, when good points stand out here and there.

This is no justification of their errors, but it is a fact that much good lives in many who are slammed hard. Having lived among criminals and reformed them, I can testify there is a good side to every sinner.

Urges Contributions to Celebration Fund

Editor Boston American:

What Dr. Edwin O. Read said this week before the Algonquin Club at the Hotel Somerset caught my eye and, much more, I believe it is true. We have to deplore the parsimony of Boston and Massachusetts in appropriating only $125,000 for the Tercentenary celebration this year, when Chicago for their anniversary three years from now, have raised over 10 millions of dollars.

There are people who would respond with their little toward a public subscription list. Boston has something to celebrate this year. It has a history to be proud of. It is time to make a move over it. We owe so much to the forefathers who were willing to suffer to give this republic a beginning. Let us swell out with pride over what Boston in the past has accomplished and make it evident in generous contributions toward stamping this a memorable year in history. We can do it, if we can be aroused to its significance.

Two Right Angles to All Triangles

Editor Boston American:

You had a head line in your paper yesterday that made me much. It is this: "Married Life, Endless Chain of Triangles." Don't forget that one triangle has two right angles. This is in reference to Faith Baldwin's story "The Office Wife."

Much rather married life is like a rectangle, something is always going off the handle, because there are three creatures that want their finger over their toilets, that anger many husbands. These creatures are: flies, cats and women. Apologies to Victor Hugo. It is the time that women consume in making their toilets that wears the patience of many a husband in the married life. When two persons have measured their abilities by the yardstick of the world and know thereon precisely what they are, never have any difficulty of living happily after marriage.

NATATORS STAR AT BROOKLINE

With a wealth of New England aquatic stars appearing in swimming and diving contests, the Brookline gym and baths committee staged its annual exhibition last night in the Municipal swimming pool.

Esther Morison, New England women's senior indoor and outdoor diving champion, held a capacity gathering spellbound with her exhibition of skill on the spring board.

Another feature was an underwater race for juniors, in which Thelma Bond and Gladys Nordell tied for honors. Burt Richards won a novelty waltz stroke race from among the male entrants.

Members of the Women's Swimming Association of Brookline participated in the program, which included life saving demonstrations, a straightaway race and novelty contests. Ethel Lee and Helen Gould were prominent in the activities.
